President Eisenhower Saturday assigned Harold Stassen to seek practical ways of cutting down world armaments in order to avert atomic disaster.

No Price Mark

dents. Our new State College is presided over by an enthusiastic staff, planning and carrying out a gigantic building program as 4200 students are enrolled. *

-As we view our great national leaders of government we know the price tag is not the inducement. For every public official that disgraces himself there are thousands who carry great responsibilities with honor. Some of our greatest leaders are men who have sacrificed large incomes to serve the people. They have found greater personal success in the service and vocation they have chosen.

We find our great naval installations presided over by men dedicated to our service. Wherever they go they are honored because of their service and particularly because of their acceptance of responsibility for service to our local civic and social activities. There are no high bracket incomes in the armed services. But the servicemen who meet with our civic leaders and organizations are personal successes, because they are so greatly respected.

At the same time many of our greatest financially successful individuals are among our greatest personal successes. They have, throughout their careers, accepted responsibility for civic service to their community. They have given of themselves and held the respect and affection of their fellow citizens. It is probable their personal success in this regard is their most treasured accomplishment.

These are factors that should be carefully considered by young people in choosing a vocation to follow. They should carefully consider the vocation for which they are best suited and the one in which they would be happy. Then they should adjust their sights to living within the income provided by that vocation. That can bring the greatest satisfaction in life and assure them the greatest personal success.

Virtually every vocation has places at the top for the ambitious and energetic individual. That gives the incentive necessary to keep people interested and constantly improving themselves. But the price tag must not be too greatly considered when making the choice. It was said to this writer many years ago that "There is no percentage in being a financial success and a personal failure." It is a philosophy that gives perspective and, if followed, will make one realize there is no price mark on success.—L.A.C.

FDR had told Stalin that he thought the United States, the Soviet Union and China, but not Britain, should operate a long-term trusteeship over Korea. He said he felt the British would resent being left out.

He also said he contemplated a trusteeship for Indochina, which had been French, even though the British objected because they were afraid it might upset their aim to recover Burma as their

Human Side of Yalta Shows Stalin, Churchill and FDR Swapping Jokes

Liere is the human side, as culled from the Yalta papers:
Roosevelt badly underestimated how many people would take part, much as a housewife underestimates her food budget. At one point, he wrote Churchill he would have 35 aides. At another, the told Stalin it would be 70. He wound up with 350. When the Americans and British got to Yalta their total was more than 700.

Food was another thing Roosevelt loved. For that reason, apparently, he inquired in one telegram to Averell Harriman, then ambassador to Moscow: "I hope that you will be able to arrange, without offending the Russians, for the setting up of my personal mess ashore and the use of my stewards and cooks. I desire this in order to maintain my usual diet." Harriman wired back the next day that Foreign Minister Molotov had said okay.

Charles E. (Chip) Bohlen, now ambassador to Moscow and then Roosevelt's interpreter, kept notes for this toastful dinner. He reported Stalin "in an excellent humor." He re-cords that Stalin toasted Churchill as "the bravest governmental figure in the world." Churchill responded with a toast to Stalin "as the mighty leader of a mighty country."

At the final dinner sometime later, more toasts were drunk. This time story telling appeared in order, too. Roosevelt told why he had decided to extend diplomatic recognition to the Soviet Union. Bohlen's minutes read:

INVITATION TO SHARE

Life, like a cookie jar, would soon be empty if everyone continued to accept the good things it offers and never put back any good things in return.

That is why public spirited citizens and civic-minded business firms throughout the city are being invited to share in the cost of furnishing and equipping the first new general hospital to be built in Long Beach in more than 20 years.

Costing a total of $1,254,000, this critically-needed community project will provide accommodations for 96 beds, expandable to 200, and contain complete facilities for medical, surgical, obstetrical, pediatrics, psychiatric, contagious diseases, emergency. and out-patient services.

Covering an entire square block, fronting on Pacific Avenue between 27th and 28th Streets, the 41/2-acre site of the new hospital is fully paid for; and construction of the building was recently assured when the Bank of America approved a long term mortgage loan for $400,000. However, one of the provisions of the bank commitment is that an additional $150,000, needed for furnishings and equipment, must be underwritten before the loan is granted. More than 300 individuals, civic organizations and business firms have already made contributions ranging from $1 to $14,000; but an additional $82,000 must be raised NOW if construction is to be started in time for occupancy this year. The need is great and the time is short. Even a contribution equivalent to only a penny a day for one year will be helpful. All contributions, large or small, are deductible for income tax purposes up to 30% of your adjusted gross income.

Consider These Facts in Evaluating the Worthiness of This Appeal

- Long Beach is dangerously underhospitalized.
- According to the California Board of Hospitals, Long Beach has less than half enough beds to take care of the normal needs of this area: to say nothing of what would be required in the face of a sudden epidemic or national emergency.
- There is a critical shortage of beds in all local hospitals, but the situation facing patients of the asteapathic profession is especially grave because the leases on the two small esteopathic hospitals now in use have expired and present facilities are being occupied on a temporary month-to-month
- More than 100,000 people, or 20 % of the population of the Long Beach area, are patients of osteopathic physicians and surgeons and are dependent on the completion of this new facility for proper hospital and surgical care in time
- The new hospital will be administered by a local NON-PROFIT corporation, NO PERSONAL GAIN will inure to anyone from its operation. It will serve and benefit the ENTIRE COMMUNITY.
- This is a community project, fig nanced in the true tradition of American "free enterprise" WITH-OUT aid from any governmental agency.

- The project will culminate approximately 10 years of continuous effort and personal sacrifice on the part of the 130 osteopathic physicians and surgeons practicing in this area.
- The doctors, themselves, contributed $569,000 out of their own pockets and financed 88% of the cost of the project before appealing to the general public.
- This is a one-time appeal ONLY.
   There will be NO annually recurring request for funds.
- Not one penny of any contribution will be used for promotion expense. There are NO paid solicitors. The ENTIRE amount collected will be spent for furnishings and equipment only.
- This project has the wholehearted endorsement and active support of scores of leading organizations, including: the Long Beach Hospital Council, composed of Seaside Memorial, St. Mary's, Community and Harriman Jones hospitals; the Chamber of Commerce, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Long Beach Retailers Associated, North Long Beach Lions Club, Uptown Kiwanis Club, Uptown Optimist Club, Lakewood Chamber of Commerce, Downtown Optimist Club and Sales Executives' Club.

Hospital Project

AN ACCOMPLISHMENT of the first order on the local scene was made known this week by a group of osteopathic physicians and surgeons.

Through their efforts a new $1,254,000 general hospital will be built here.

The community has a pressing need for the facility. It will be the first such hospital constructed in Long Beach in 20 years.

The project is all the more impressive because it has grown from the personal efforts and contributions of the osteopaths themselves. It is an excellent example of private initiative and co-operation. More than 100 of the doctors have personally contributed a total of $569,000. Some $135,000 more has come from other private sources. The balance will be provided through a long-term bank loan and further contributions from private sources.

The doctors have gone ahead with this program even though Long Beach voters two years ago approved a proposal to use some of the city's tideland oil revenue for hospital projects.

A court suit questions the legality of spending tideland revenue on this and other upland public improvement projects. Rather than await the uncertain outcome of litigation, the doctors have proceeded with their plans.

The attitude is realistic and forward-looking. Perhaps there is too great a tendency among Long Beach people to rest community progress on the future availability of oil revenue. The community needs and must provide itself with certain things regardless of the status of oil funds. We should not fall into the end-of-the-rainbow habit of thinking. It will be splendid, of course, if the pending court decision on the oil suit is in Long Beach's favor. But in any event, this city has the capacity to advance and provide necessary facilities in traditional ways.

The action by the group of osteopaths is a happy reminder of this fact. They deserve solid support in their undertaking.

A Permanent Way to Honor a Loved One ... and Serve Your Community, Too!

The scape of today's modern hospital is so wide that scaner or later it touches the lives of all of us. A hospital is more than an elaborate organization for curing people's ills. It is an assurance of man's desire to help his fellow-man. It is a community responsibility. People contribute to hospitals for the same reason they help build churches, schools and libraries; and no finer contribution can be made to society than by sharing in the support of an institution which encircles life with such vigilant care. The new Long Beach Osteopathic hospital affers limitless memorial opportunities and your gift may be selected in accordance with your personal wishes. For further details simply call 4-7715 or 4-9436.

Churchill Will Resign Soon, Friends Say

LONDON P—Friends of Sir Winston Churchill said Saturday night the aging statesman intends to retire "within weeks" as prime minister of Great Britain.

Official confirmation was lackness to the well-informed sources.

ing, but well-informed sources who discounted previous rumors of Churchill's retirement were accepting the report as solidly hased.

Persons close to the 80-yearold premier said he may stay in harness as an ordinary member of Parliament and elder statesman, keeping himself available as possible emissary for informal peace talks with Russia—a goal he has long cherished.

Churchill's successor would be Foreign Secretary Sir Anthony Eden, the "golden boy" of British politics whom the premier first nominated as his political heir nearly 13 years ago. Eden is Politicians were predicting freely that a general election will follow Eden's succession, either in June or October. October was the most-favored date.

The Conservatives' five-year term of office runs until October. 1956, but a severe split in the Labor opposition has encouraged Conservatives to think about an earlier date for voting.

Home Town Spirit

BUD LEMBKE, who is Lakewood editor for these newspapers, recently wrote a story which put a finger on one of the unique features of Los Angeles basin cul-

He told of a pair of servicemen who make a round trip of 142 miles daily to and from their duties at Camp

This probably makes them the champion commuters of the area. We doubt that many persons travel that far to work.

However, long-distance commuting is common practice. We know of no other area in the country where as many persons have their residential and employment interests so widely separated.

It happens that the two men of whom Mr. Lembke wrote have developed a sense of loyalty-"home town spirit"-with regard to the area where they reside. But unfortunately this is not always the case.

In a county where a citizen works in one city and lives in another, and where you often have to look for a municipal sign post to tell where one town ends off and another starts, the home town spirit is often difficult to cultivate.

This difficulty becomes apparent particularly in fund drives such as Community Chest and Red Cross and in elections. For instance, people may know who the U.S. Senators from California are, but may not know the Congressman or Assemblymen of their district. Certainly there is not that feeling of unity and community loyalty and the political understanding which exists in cities with well-defined boundaries. In the Los Angeles basin there's a definite "Southern California" spirit, but the home town spirit is harder to come by.

This condition presents its problems, but also its opportunities, to individual communities.

The city that can provide rallying points for the inherent home town instinct stands to enjoy economic and social benefits.

Long Beach has better opportunities along this line SO THE WORD is that the Mallon suit design will be handed down soon by the State Supreme Court—possibly in the week of March than many cities in the Los Angeles basin. It has been long established. It has a central business area located 2 near the center of community government. It has a distinctive recreational facility - a long beach - which draws people from a wide surrounding area. The city is now building a large auditorium annex, which will give us one of the best meeting places in the country.

Proper development and use of such facilities can Proper development and use of such facilities can make Long Beach even more of a center of interest and pride for a large area—though the forces of expansion and change tend to destroy community distinctions in the county generally.

So it came as no surprise to the American people to hear officially that Soviet Premier Joseph Stalin demanded and feceived sweeping concessions from a sick American President as the price for Russian entry into the war against Japan.

Why then, were the Yalta papers made public when they contained nothing new?

· It is reported that Secretary Dulles' decision to publish was forced by Republican leaders who claimed the material was heing "leaked" to a few newspapers and magazines.

A GREAT RELIEF

But I suspect, also, that it was a great relief to the administration to bring these "seerets" out in the open where they could be scrutinized by fill, thus permitting further discussion and debate but end-ing undocumented rumors and esponsible talk. If one cares to take a more cynical view, the Republicans have made good on their promise to brand a Democratic President as responsible for the loss of China and the rise of Soviet power.

How Will Court Decision Affect Allen Proposal to Grab L.B. Tideland Funds?

That touches off a flurry of speculation as to the possible findings of the Court in this tre-mendously important case, and as to the effect of the decision on the Allen "tidelands grab" of the decision on the similar how in the Legislature.

What is this all about, anyhow? Today let's the back-take a quick chronological run over the back-ground. That may help to pre-pare for a better understand-

1938—Supreme Court rules that city has full title to tide-lands and has right to drill them for oil. 1947—Supreme Court rules that city cannot spend tidelands oil money away from the tide-lands themselves "in the absence of legislation to the contrary."

1951—Legislature passes AB 3400, requested by Long Beach, which relieved 50 per cent of the tideland oil revenues from the above listed restrictions on tidelands use.

1953—Felix Mallon files suit, challenging constitutionality of AB 3400 and contending city must spend money only on tidelands and for nurposes listed in legislative acts of 1911.

purposes listed in legislative acts of 1911,

It is presumed the court will say whether veit's mental and physical the city can spend half the tidelands revenues for upland improvements, such as hospitals, parks, public buildings and so on.

What has this to do with the Allen bill, which proposes to take the city's tidelands money for the state?

After the Mallon suit got into the Supreme Court some midstate lawyers, claiming to

After the Mallon suit got into the Supreme Court, some midstate lawyers, claiming to represent the interests of all California taxpayers, entered the case as "friends of the court." They contended that Long Beach holds the tidelands (and the oil money) only in trust for the grant purposes, and that any money not needed for those purposes should go to the state which granted the trust.

WHO REALLY OWNS THEM?

That raises the question of just who really owns the tidelands and the money. Long Beach has shown (in AB 3400) that it doesn't need all the money for the grant purposes, but it contends that any money released from those purposes still belongs to Long Beach.

Assemblyman Bruce Allen bases his "tide-lands grab" bill exactly on the theory of the "friends of the court" in the Mallon case. He says that any money we don't need specifically for harbor purposes should go to the state. On that basis, he's claiming millions of present funds, plus all future revenues.

If the Supreme Court decision rules specifically on the question of tidelands ownership, it may have a profound effect on the fate of the Allen bill. If it re-affirms a finding in the 1938 case (City vs. Marshall) that all right, title and interest were given to Long Beach, there should no trouble in disposing quickly of Allen's bill.

If it upholds the theory that the state is really the owner of the local tidelands, and Long Beach just holds them as a sort of agent of the state, the problem of fighting the Allen bill will be seriously complicated. We would no doubt fight the proposed seizure on moral grounds, but it would be a more difficult fight.

The Court may not include an outright declaration on ownership in its decision. If it doesn't, the fight will proceed much on the same basis as it has been going, with one side claiming the city owns the tidelands, the other that the state owns them.

Yalta Big-3 Tore Principle to Shreds

WASHINGTON - The famous "Yalta papers" now made public after 10 years of secrecy merely confirm what was suspected at the time-namely, that moral principle was fladisregrantly disregarded by Messsrs.

Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill and that the Atlantic Charter, with its professions of high purpose, was torn to shards has known the main facts—that the people of Poland were sold down the river and that Stalin was appeased again and again. The blunders made at Yalta have altered the whole course of modern history.

Already the apologists are crying out that "it's all water over the dam anyhow," but they forget that, unless the facts of historic conferences are clearly revealed, no lessons on he learned that will precan be learned that will pre-vent a recurrence of the same mistakes in the future.

For today many of the ardent advocates of "peaceful coexistence" are talking the same language of surrender and appeasement as was heard at Yalta. It matters little to such advocates that more than such advocates that more than 30,000 American boys gave their lives and 110,000 were wounded in Korea in a noble attempt to maintain the principle of collective security.

It is precisely this sin of expediency which is disclosed repeatedly in the "Yalta papers," and that's why it is important and that's why it is important for the whole world to read now what happened when well-meaning men like the late President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill mistakenly put their trust in Stalin and in the professed intentions of the ommunist regime.

It may be true that there was Communist infiltration in the American delégation at Yalta, that Alger Hiss was hypnotized by Communist philosophy and that he helped create the atmosphere of trustfulness. But the philosophical prejudices of Alger Hiss or of Harry Dexter White, then Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, do not explain the timidity and the softness which both Roosevelt and Churchill manifested in their dealings with Stalin. There is evidence that both the American and British leaders overestimated the military and political importance of Soviet Russia and made concessions that have brought on the "cold war" of postwar years. STOOD ALONE

Few people will read the full text of the "Yalta papers," which runs about 500,000 words, but the leaders of thought in America as well as words. members of Congress and others throughout the government charged with responsibility for future steps in world policy will want to examine carefully the tragic record of appearsement written in those docu-ments lest the same mistakes be made now.

This correspondent wrote just after the Yalta conference many criticisms of what was done there, and unfortunately stood almost alone as a critic in those days.

Naturally the "Yalta papers" have since gotten into partisan politics. The Republican National Platform of 1952 denounced the decisions made at National while the Demogratis Yalta, while the Democrats have always felt they must de-fend what happened there. The truth is there has been an appeasement sentiment right along in both parties. It cropped up this very week in connection with the far east-ern crisis, as a number of firstyear Democrats in the House of Representatives called for a new "declaration of foreign policy" which savors of the same kind of thing that emerged from the Yalta con-

Their talk is of a "plebiscite" for Formosa and a trusteeship, but the tyranny of the Communist tyrants on the Chinese maintand and the need for a free election there is ignored. The idea of "coalition" of any kind with the Communists has been proved worthless—and, indeed, the Nationalist govern-ment in China was undermined by the same tactics on the part some American officials.
So the lessons of Yalta are plain, and they add up to the fact that compromise with and concession to gangsters is never justified, and that de-serting the principle of selfdetermination of peoples in free elections does not bring stability or a coexistence that is peaceful.

forever, as two lawmaking bodies are just one too many. There never should be more than one in a democracy. It perhaps was needed at the time the Constitution was adopted to humor the small states.

The Senate was set up to copy the royal House of Lords in Great Britain, as many people still had sentimental reasons and loyalties to the motherland. The House of Lords still exists, but the only power left to it is to postpone legislation. I predict that within 10 years it will be abolished, as will our Senate. Why have two separate agencies to enact national laws in a democracy, any more than two city councils, two boards of directors in corporations, or two school boards?

I also think we should abolish the electorial college of the horse and buggy days and in the future elect President and Vice President by popular vote.

This function of the Department of Justice is highly important since the support of deserted children is costing the state at least $83,000,000 a year in welfare funds. And unless a strong deterrent is exercised, the situation could grow into a colossal racket.

This section's batting average in tracing down the deserting parents is remarkably high as in many cases little more than the parent's name is provided the central information

A large detail of police equipped with tear gas bombs has been ordered to patrol Olympis Stadium and its immediate vicinity to prevent repetition of the bloody riot which marred the teams' meeting at Montreal Thursday night. Detroit got that game 4-1 on a forfeit when rioting broke out.

Red Wing officials, Detroit police, league officials and even NHL president Clarence Campbell all are pitching in to avoid "another Montreal."

Thousands of hockey-crazed fans stormed for seven hours in Montreal after the game, Thursday night. The riot broke out because Maurice (the Rocket) Richard was suspended by Campbell for the rest of the season for attacking a player and official.

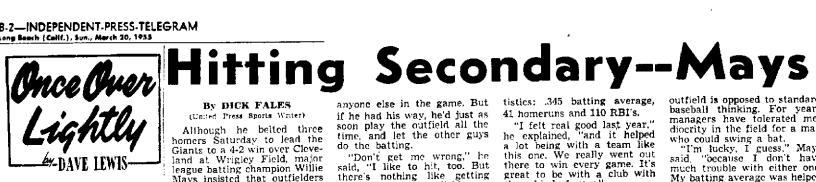

An anonymous phone call to a Montreal newspaper Saturday related that several Montreal fans will explode tear gas bombs if Montreal gets ahead. It would then be forfeited to

I never got the interview in print. I wasn't fast enough. I was just selecting the proper adjectives when the show shuddered—and shuttered.

For weeks after that, when any name-dropper mentioned "Kim" they were speaking of Kim Novak.

But lightning struck twice.

But lightning struck twice.

Even was a startled everybody by declining to accept star billing. "That's not commercial—and it's not Texan!" I told her.

"Wait'll I get these artificial eyelashes off. Oh, you've got your camera? Wait'll I put 'em back on." Kim stuck them back on, then swung around. She's on if you must know and the mother of two. But she plays a "chantoosey" in Kansas City—and with just drawl, just flounce, she gets bellylaughs.

There was, a bashful tap on the door. In came, almost shyly, Lillian Gish—"Just one of your breathless fans," she called her-self—complimenting Kim on her new-found gifts as a comedienne.

THIS BIG ONE TOO MUCH FOR 5 FISHERMEN

GALLIPOLI, Italy (UD)-Five fishermen who set out to get some big ones told Saturday how they got away from the biggest one of all.

The fishermen said that while out in their boat Fri-day, a 130-foot Mediter-ranean whale approached. It attempted to overturn their small boat by "play-fully" whacking at them with its tail.

They said they rowed vigorously for the shore. But the whale refused to give up the chase. It followed them all the way in and returned to the open sea only after they were safely on the beach.

Sure you're out in the country-in a staterestricted area. And that powerful Cadillac engine is itching your throttle toe.

But don't do it!

That isn't the purpose of this engine. It was created to give you phenomenal bursts of speed when you need them.

It was created to give your Cadillac the long life and freedom from repairs that come when your engine "loafs" at the normal driving speeds.

And it was created to give you the confidence that is yours only when you know you are master of every driving situation.

So don't use that tremendous power to fellow motorist.

In fact, a good rule for owners of the 1955 Cadillac might very well read: "Be last away when the light turns green. Remember: it's not how fast, but how wonderful.'

And how wonderful it is!

Let's say you are trying to go from one climate to another in a single day. Is it four hundred-six hundred miles?

Just follow the laws of the states you cross and drive until you are ready for bed. What about getting tired? To the average Cadillac driver, it just doesn't happen!

Mile for mile-hundred for hundred-there just wasn't ever another car like this. That's why we say: Don't try to prove anything in a hundred feet. Prove it, rather, in a hundred miles—or in five times as many—or in half a dozen years.

Of course, the foregoing message is addressed to the person who has already purchased his Cadillac.

But we also have a message for those who still have that delightful experience in store. Come in and drive the car. That's when an hour will prove something. It will prove you're missing out on the finest motor car washington (CP—The Federal Communications Commission proposed Saturday that Congress authorize it to conduct a sweeping study of the entire broadcasting—and telecasting—industry.

The proposal was made in a preliminary report of the FCC to the Senate's interstate commerce committee. The report dealt with several specific problems in television. It said, however, that a "general study by the commission" into the economic structure and the operations of the TV industry is "essential."

Chairman Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.) of the commerce committee, said the failure of the commission to propose "immediate remedial action" for some of television's ills may result in "soaking" the public millions.

CITY Councilman Ray Kealer has a new secretary. I got acquainted with her when I called Bro. Kealer Friday to tell him that I had some copies of legislative bills he wanted me to bring down from Sacramento.

I dialed Kealer's number, A feminine voice answered;

"This is the electronic secretary of Mr. Raymond C. Kealer," said the voice.

It went on to tell me that Mr. Kealer was not there, but that I could leave a message for him. It told me to start dictating my message at the end of a tone signal, and that I would have 30 seconds to do it.

The voice reminded me to be sure and leave my name and telephone number, and promised to transmit my message to Kealer when he came in.

I HAD heard of those gadgets, but it was the first I encounfered here and for a moment I was non-plussed.

But I managed to dictate my little message, and thus participated in the use of another modern communications mira-

At the end of 30 seconds, the voice told me it was sorry, my time was up, and advised me if I hadn't finished my message, I could dial again and dictate the rest of it.

LATER, Bro. Kcaler called me back and told me more about the new secretary, which he leases from the telephone com-

He let me listen to the messages that had accumulated while he was out.

One was a call from Frank Hardesty, the harbor petroleum engineer, who told the Councilman to call him back.

Another was from Atlee Ar-neld, deputy city attorney, who gave Kealer a legal opinion on some ordinance. That one, of course, took another 30 second period on the wire recorder. Nobody ever gave a legal opinion in 30 seconds.

THE gadget is enclosed in a daily programs at the four Long Beach clubs: Central, 1585 Chestmensions.

Messages are recorded on a wire or tape, and these can either be cleared or kept for permanent records.

Kealer said many of his callrs the has had the thing only a few days showed evidence of being puzzled and startled by the experience they encountered when they called him.

Boys Cilios of Loss of Rose evants was correctly and the correctl when they called him.

The secretary duly recorded the message and played it back to Kealer when he got home.

ONLY a few of the electronic secretaries are out here now, but more will be available soon. according to Scotty Scott of the telephone co., who gave me more of the lowdown on the innovation. The cost: $15 to install, $17.50 per month.

Scott also told me a little about the new "home to school" service which has been put into use here for the benefits of "shut in" youngsters who are unable to go to class rooms.

Equipment for this service includes a microphone and loudspeaker on the teacher's desk. and others at the bedside of the child. The youngster is able to hear what coes on in the classroom, and at the proper time recites himself through the speaker system.

Cruisers Due Here Monday

By DON BRACKENBURY

The 3,600 men of Cruiser Division 3 come home Monday, home from a Far East tour of duty that took them right under the guns of Communist China.

The three ships of the division, the Toledo, Helena and Pittsburgh, are scheduled to arrive at 9 a.m.

at 9 a.m.

The Toledo, flagship of the division commander, Rear Adm.
Ralph E. Wilson, will tie up at Berth 12, Pier B, in the Port of Long Beach.

The Helena and Pittsburgh will dock at Berths 13 and 14, Long Beach Naval Shipyard. Dependents of crew members of these two ships will be permitted to enter the shipyard through Gate 5.

During their four of duty, the division took part in the evacuation of Chinese Nationalists from the Tachen Islands, just off the China coast.

It was the fifth tour in the Far East for the Toledo and Helena since 1950. The Pitts-burgh joined the Pacific Fleet just before sailing for the Far. East in December.

The Pittsburgh got a new, and well-known, skipper since her departure from Long Beach. He is Capi. W. G. (Moon) Chappel, USN, who won fame during World War II as a submarine commander.

Capt. Chappel was awarded two Navy Crosses and three Silver Stars for his daring as a submarine commander. His previous cruiser experience was in torpedoing two—Japanese ships, that is.

Osteopathic Hospital Fund at $68,000

Approximately $68,000 already has been subscribed by more than 300 individuals and corporate donors for the new $1,254,• 000 osteopathic hospital, it was disclosed Saturday night by Joe Bishop, general chairman of the city-wide sponsoring committee.

"This leaves a balance of $82.-000 which, under the terms of a bank loan commitment for $400. 000, must be raised immediately if contruction of the 96-bed medical facility is to be started in time for occupancy this year." said Bishop. The new hospital will be located on a 4½-acre site between 27th and 28th St. on Pacific Ave.

Mrs. Gus Lucking, co-chairman of the hospital drive, joined Bishop in emphasizing the appeal for public subscription. Individuals or business firms

Douglas Aircraft Co. Asked what Red Cross did for him during his 21-month im-prisonment, the former Air Force officer smiled reminiscently.

"Red Cross fed me," he answered.
"Without the food parcels from International Red Cross all of us would have starved to death.

"We had American, British, Canadian, Scottish, Indian and New Zealand Red Cross parcels plus Argentina bulk, consisting of meats and cheeses, which was planned as a supplement and was divided up among our, whole group. The food parcels were allotted one per man per week, but most of the time we rationed ourselves to half a parcel a week for the eventuality that some-thing might prevent further parcels from coming in."

When he was shot down over Aachen, Tobin had a broken back and his right arm was paralyzed. He was taken to the dispensary at Aachen, but since he was the first American officer captured there, the Germans didn't know what to do with him. At Aachen, Tobin had his first contact with the Red Cross when a representative brought him post cards and letter forms.

At all times, food supplies from the Germans were bad, but the prisoners weren't mistreated othprisoners weren't mistreated otherwise. Tobin said. Only at Sagan was he questioned, for a Luke, Lockport, Ill., is believed period of five days, but at to have made the first rooltop Mooseburg routine snooping by helicopter landing in Indiana the guards and ferrets was exwen he solved his parking pected. And the Red Cross got it for us."

Tobin made another contact with the Red Cross when he returned to the United States and was hospitalized in Santa Ana. Tobin shook his head slowly and said with admiration. "Those said with admiration, "Those Gray Ladies. They're wonderful —cheerful, pleasant, helpful running errands or reading books or writing letters for the pa-

Breakfast is served each day in the school cafeteria from 7:30 a.m. to 8:25 a.m.

The board of education inaugurated the "breakfast program" at Chicago high schools about a month ago on the theory that many students don't eat an ade-quate morning meal.

The program has stirred up a mild controversy and some taxpayers have written to the Chicago papers protesting the idea as a "frill."

But a teachers wrote in that the school breakfast is a good thing for any youngster whose mother works and must leave home early.

Another teacher said the program is part of a trend, in which the schools have been forced to take over some of the functions of the home.

Principal Harry S. Carr said the program "certainly hasn't caused anybody any trouble, and it's a good thing for those who don't get a good breakfast at home." Gym Instructor W. S. Clements said he ordered his class to run a couple of laps around the gym the other day and one of the youngsters just couldn't ke it.

"It turned out he had hard-any breakfast," Clements

Makes Many Feel Old

Before Their Time

Breakfast at School Stirs Chicago Row Until today you might as well have been putting your expensive creams on glass!

For several years, we at Max Factor have been searching for the answers to certain questions:

"Why do women with dry skin problems never seem to get the help they long for, even from the most expensive creams?"

"Why do so many women keep switching from one 'oily skin' treatment preparation to another?"

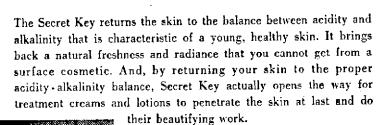

"Why do blackheads and blemishes still persist—even when a woman follows the strictest corrective beauty routine?"

We spent thousands of hours here in the Max Factor Laboratories searching for the answers to these puzzling questions. This search uncovered a startling fact: there is a chemical barrier in the skin that keeps creams and lotions from getting in and going to work. This barrier develops because the skin does not have correct pH* balance (It is either too acid or too alkaline).

No wonder women were creaming their skins faithfully night after night, peering into their mirrors hopefully day after day-and finding disappointment. For few women have that proper skin balance.

We unlock one of Nature's closely-guarded secrets

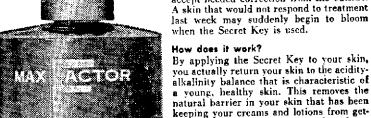

A way had to be discovered to break through this stubborn barrier, so that creams and lotions could bring relief to the parched or oilclogged skin cells underneath. A way had to be found to return a woman's skin to its proper pH* balance. I can now reveal that our scientists have found a way to do this successfully-through the use of a remarkable liquid preparation we call the Secret Key. *pH - Potential of Hydrogen, the dermatologist's way of saying it

The discovery of the Secret Key, we realized, opened up completely new possibilities for a woman to bring out all the natural loveliness of her skin. We proceeded to develop four new groups of corrective creams and lotions-treatments for the dry skin, the oily skin, the disturbed skin and the normal skin that could follow right behind the Secret Key and help the skin to help itself. We believe these products are

Secret Key before these new corrective creams

Today, I am happy to be able to place these new products in your hands-and to turn over to you the Secret Key that can open the way

KEY

By applying the Secret Key to your skin, you actually return your skin to the acidity alkalinity balance that is characteristic of a young, healthy skin. This removes the natural barrier in your skin that has been keeping your creams and lotions from get-ting in and doing their beneficial work.

The Secret Key is a remarkable new liquid preparation that opens up your skin to accept needed correction from the outside.

How is it used?

To restore natural radiance to your skin, Secret Key may be used alone after cleansing. To correct a dry skin, use Secret Key together with the related creams formulated for the dry skin: Double-Depth Cleansing Cream, Enriched Hormone Cream and Active Moisturizer (a new type of moisturizer that remains active on your skin all day long under make-up). To correct an oily skin, use Secret Key together with the related creams formulated for the oily skin: Gentle Foam Cleanser, Facial Pack and Vita-Night Cream (uses Vitamins A and D to absorb and gradually correct excess oiliness).

To correct a disturbed skin, use Secret Key together with the related formulations for the disturbed skin: Gentle Foam Cleanser and Clear-Up (a new skin-tinted antiseptic lotion that conceals and at the same time helps to correct unsightly skin blemishes).

To soften and smooth a normal skin, use Secret Key with the related creams formulated for the normal skin: Double-Depth Cleansing Gream and Velvety Night Gream.

The Secret Key preparation and Secret Key Treatment Groups are now on sale at leading stores.

Why Scrap Free Competition

In the production of Natural Gas or any other product?

Natural gas comes to most consumers through interstate pipelines and local utility systems. They have franchises from state or local bodies, and have long been regulated.

The producers who find the gas have not been regulated because more than 5,000 of them compete vigorously—and free competition is the best of all price controls.

Yet these producers have recently been singled out for Federal controls and pricefixing.

This is a step without peacetime precedentto price-fix a consumer product at its source. It is a step that deeply disturbs many Americans, including the undersigned com-

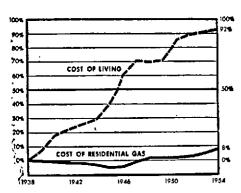

They believe the proposed controls are against the public interest and can benefit no one. They believe the issue goes far beyond gas. It goes to the roots of America's greatness. They believe the controls plan is unwise for many reasons.

It is Unnecessary because gas supplies have tripled in sixteen years. And costs to consumers have risen a nation-wide average of only one-eleventh as much as the cost of

It is Dangerous because it could easily be the first step toward Federal controls on coal or oil-or lumber or grain or your

It is Unfair because it singles out one competitive industry for such controls.

It is Shortsighted because it stifles the bold and risky exploring that's needed to assure adequate supplies.

As shown by the chart above, based on figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics for a national average, the cost of natural gas to the residential consumer has gone up only one-eleventh as much as the cost of living in sixteen years.

Are you guilty of NOT having visited our "twin woodcraft" dens? If so, you are cordially invited to do so, and along with ourselves, enjoy the "soft luxurious textures" of the some 32 full size panels on display. We have endeavored to show as large an area as possible, simply because it lets you see at a glance just what that wall with the fireplace will look like, surrounded by rich grained mahogany, ash, birch, sumari, gum, or many other species that are displayed in our dens. ideal for the boy's or girl's bedroom and den. where those little feet leave their trademarks, and at the same time protecting the plaster and giving you valuable insulation!

It Is NOT a Big Expense Example:

For the Bedroom you can cover the walls with a 48" high wainscoat, using soft, rich grained Philippine mahogany paneling . . for less than the average home spends for cigarets in 40 days, or approximately . . .

We have these panels finished in different types of paints and varnishes, with all the necessary information on each species.

MAY WE AGAIN EX-TEND an invitation to VALUE OF DAY US ALLY whether it be for the items above, or for any one of the some five thousand items that we carry in stock; such as, paints, electrical fixtures, plumbing, hard-ware, lumber, plywood (we cut to size), etc.

Mrs. Franklin Waters New League Leader

By MARY LOU ZEHMS

In major cities throughout the country, members of the Association of the Junior Leagues of America are volunteering their services in cultural and civic en-deavors in their respective communities. The Junior League of Long Beach, since its founding in 1931, probably has done as much, if not more, than any other single organization to aid this community in its many projects and drives.

Each year the League selects outstanding young women who are interested in giving their efforts, time and thoughts to the betterment of Long Beach, Friday, during the an-nual installation I uncheon meeting of the Junior League meeting of the Junior League at Lafayette Supper Room. 26 new provisionals were intro-duced. They will be launched on a course of study and then will serve their required hours in volunteer service. At the end of the year they will become active members.

To direct the work of the League this year will be Mrs. Franklin Waters, wife of Dr. Franklin Waters, A graduate of Wilson High School and Oc-of Wilson High School and Oc-cidental College, Mrs. Waters has always exhibited deep in-terest in her community. She has served on the board of the YWCA and the Long Feach Auxiliary to the Los Angeles County Medical As-sociation, in addition to being active in Long Beach Chil-deen's Theater. Her services to dren's Theater. Her services to the Junior League of Long Beach have been exceedingly helpful in the past as chairman of the Community Arts, Social and Education committees, Also, she has served as vice

Nightingales Plan Novel Easter Party for Family

An Easter party for the entire family will take place next Sunday at Lakewood Country Club between 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. as a fund raising project by Nightingales, junior organization of the Auxiliary to Children's Memorial Hospital. Although it will be several weeks until Easter Sunday, the novel idea of an early party was formulated so parents would be able to choose bunnies and baskets for the dear ones in their home. They will then be delivered to their door several days in advance of Easter.

vance of Easter.

All the baskets have been assembled by Nightingale members. There will be special ones for the little girls and boys, sectional baskets for mother filled with candy and larger baskets for father. While the Nightingales are working hard to raise funds for charity, they also are being practical with the type of baskets selected so they can be used later around the home. Mrs. Kenneth Henry and Mrs. William A. Jameson are responsible for the attractiveness of these baskets.

In charge of decorations is Mrs. Travis White. Refreshments are being planned by Mrs. Frederick Jensen. Special entertainment is being provided for the kiddies.

Janet Durnin on Pink Party Cloud

By BETTY WENTWORTH

The exciting role of bride-elect and party honoree is Janet Durnin's this week. She arrived home from Stanford for spring vacation to find her calendar brimming with festive events. Since this is the last time she will be here before her marriage in June in Palo Alto, friends have made haste to give parties for her while they have the opportunity.

Beginning the whirl was the open house yesterday from 6 to 9 p. m. to which 150 friends were invited to greet Janet and meet her fiance, Herbert Seiter, and his patents, the Frederick Seiters of Palo Alto. Party-givers were Dr. and Mrs. Phil Hansen and their home at 3816 Woodcuff Ave. was the setting. Their daughter Phyllis hoped to arrive in time from Brigham Young University in Proce. Utah, to hostess also.

Also invited to assist were Dr. and Mrs. Frank Stanton Jr., Misses Faye Pearson. Susan Rowe, Patsy Davis. Mary Ann Durain, Linda Wood and Mary Laubscher. Peach blossoms and lavender blooms decorated the home as well as arrangements of sunny vellow defeeds. sunny yellow daffodils.

Then this afternoon Janel's parents. Dr. and Mrs. William Durnin are holding open house from 2 to 5 o'clock for peninsula neighbors and Janet's former leachers.

On Wednesday Grace (Mrs. M. John) Rowe and Eleanor (Mrs. John B.) Davis will be luncheon hostesses feting the young bride-elect at Grace's home, 17 Temple Ave. Miscellaneous gifts will be showered on the honoree by 40 friends.

Bright kitchen gadgets for Janet's future kitchen will be presented by 20 classmates at a shower Thursday eve given by Mrs. Lewis F. Seapy, 232 Roswell Ave., assisted by Mrs. Lyman Friends of Janet's from St. Anthony's, Chadwick and Stanford have been bidden to a linen shower and dessert by Louise Tripeny on Saturday at her home, 274 Argonne Ave. She'll be assisted by her mother, Mrs. D. They planned their trip in the twinkling of an eye, packed in another twinkling and headed for New York, thense by plane to Europe. First, however, they enticed John's mother, Mrs. Frederick Fowler, down from Palo Alto to keep an eye on their trio of young 'uns at 3836 Olive Ave. in their absence. This may come under the heading of a business jaunt, but it spells pleasure to us spells pleasure to us.

Complicated as a Rube Goldberg fantasy and just as entertaining is the itinerary we shall describe now. However it brooks no illness or falling by the wayside of anyone in on the plan; each must co-operate or all is lost.

Dona and John Halbert leave March 25, driving the car of John's parents, the J. B. Some things are beyond human endurance. As far as Dottie and Vic Blurton are concerned living in New Jersey is first on that list! They're back, after 16 months residence in that faroff eastern state, having stayed back there as long as they could take it. Now they're home feeling like angels who just retrieved their wings. Moved into 4360 Vermont last Tuesday, they did, with their two youngsters, Vicki and Brian. As they came back to Long Beach with love in their hearts, so LB welcomes them with arms wide open! California, aint it wonderful!

Wonderful!

Toddler size Tommy Ivey was the star of the show the other day at Mildred Wing's home when her bridge gang gave her a surprise "Grandmother Shower." Right after the supposedly "regular" luncheon the members kept Mildred busy so that one and a half year old Tommy would get in position for his "act." Then the doorbell rang and, of course, the hostess answered. There stood his nibs with his little red wagon in tow filled with the gifts for an about-to-be-grandchild of an about-to-be-grammaw! The little guy was perfect in his part and acted like a true veteran of many an encounter with women's parties! Bridge-clubbers who feted Mildred were Virginia Avery, Helen Hammon, Carol Richey, Suebelle Chuck, Elberta Taylor, Ruth Green and Bernice Donovan. Barbara Ivey was there, too, to chaperone her son. The real reason for all the fuss is way over there in Arizora where Beverly and Kenny Wing Jr, are Army stationed and awaiting a mid-May arrival.

If you see Larry Johns thumbing through notes and talking to himself this week think nothing of it. Larry will stand up before about 300 women at the Community Playhouse next Thursday morning and give a lecture—the first in a series of Drama Salons at the Playhouse. That's the sort of thing that would make any man mumble in his beard! Sybil Reed is chairman of these affairs and assisting her is Gladys Niver. "A wonderful evening," everyone agreed, when that fellow known as Richard Nixon made his talk before the World Affairs Council of Los Angeles at a dinner meeting Monday night. Helen and Bill Harrington hosted a group of Long Beach people to the event and those seated at their table were Bess and George Green Sr., Jeanette and Ray Waestman, Norma and Bill Harris and Ann and Tom McCarry. You can be mighty sure Helene and Jack Drown were present, too! After the dinner and TV appearance of the "Veep" most everyone rushed home so they could watch the second telecast of the evening at 11:30 p. m.

You can't give women such things as lobster bisque, a crisp tossed salad, party rye toast topped with bubbling broiled cheese and homemade apple sauce cake without making them happy. Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride was attractively gowned in white chiffon velveteen with a deep oval neckline and long sleeves. The full skirt of nylon net over taffeta was embroidered with velveteen leaves, and a tiara of rhinestones, pearls and silk nylon held her veil.

Mrs. Grace Dixon, matron of honor, wore moss green with a velveteen bedice and jacket and full net skirt over taffeta. A headpiece of matching green velveteen held a veil sprinkled with rhinestones and she carried red roses. Miss Lynn Shriver, maid of honor, and Misses Barbara Swinney and Rosemary Reynolds, bridesmaids, were attired in shrimp-colored ensembles fashioned like the matron of honor's. They carried blue carnations.

Attending the bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip P. Marron, 1816 E. 64th St., were Richard H. Marron, best man; Bernard F. Marron, carl Gilbert and William M. Thomas, ushers. Timothy Keehan was ring bearer and Bridget.

Bright, Bold Look for New Play Shoes

It's the Mediterranean mood for smart resort and play shoes this season. Bold, bright colors, straw woven with metallic threads and use of jewels tallic threads and use of jewels on insteps and toes distinguish one of the smart new lines known as Sun-Steps.

Bright red, blue and orange, beloved by the Mediterranean peoples, are found in both barefoot and closed toe and heel models which have the little girl look. Although the colors and models suggest the exotic countries of the Mediterranean—Spain, Italy and exone countries of the Medi-terranean—Spain, Italy and southern France—the play and resort shoes are definitely de-signed for the American foot.

Designs for Young Girls

A great fashion program is in the making for young girls and teen-agers for the spring season. Everything in the design realm devoted to the young set points to news in silhouette, color and fabric.

This season it is the long torso and slimmer lines that take the headlines. This new elongated torso silhouette outlines the young girl's figure dramatically and releases pleats or fullness in the skirt. It extends, too, to suits and coats and even has its expres-sion in sweaters and knit over-

Slimmer lines on their way in, too, are especially noticed in coats and suits. The strong acceptance of the boy coat for acceptance of the boy coat for fall strengthens its position for spring. Coat styling is 50 per cent fitted, 50 per cent loose, but almost all are straighter so that nipped fullness is gone. A print season in dresses also is well on its way in. Print also is well on its way in. Frint designers have contributed gay, novel and amusing patterns in which etched motifs, archi-tectural outlines, harlequin dia-monds, unusual stripes and bright blossoms will attract at-tention.

Quicker than you could shake the morning dew from the shamrocks of from the snamrocks of Ireland, members and friends of the Carmelite Nuns' Auxiliary were transported to the magic Isle, halfway around the globe to Asia and then down for a pleasant dipinto Mexico. This St. Patrick's Day tour of the world was arranged world was arranged

Thursday morning in Ebell Theater. Guide for the adventure was Mrs. Herbert R. Murphy, who had sifted the best of both old and new books for her third in a series of four dramatic reviews, sponsored by the auxiliary.

Mrs. Murphy pointed her literary magic carpet first at the land south of the Rio Grande when she described two differ-ent experiences of Americans in Mexico in the books, "Village in the Sun" by Danc Chanos and "My Heart Lies South" by Elizabeth Borton de Trevino.

A writer of distinction, Chanos captures the slowness of tempo of southern life and portrays an affection for the Mexican Indians he knew in the ican Indians he knew in the little town with the funny name, Ajijic.

The life of the business and professional Mexican man is related in the de Trevino book. The author, who is from Bakcersfield, was sent down to ... something to talk about!

This week we've something really special to talk about! It's the most controversial, most exciting beauty discovery of our time. It's Royal Jelly! (a secretion produced by worker bees for the purpose of feeding their queen) ... it's a seemingly miraculous substance known to be rich in many precious, potent elements, including proteins and numerous vitamins. It started speculation as a beauty aid when science asked "Why does the Queen Bee, whose body starts the same as that of any worker bee, become so big, so beautiful, and so strong ... after feeding on Royal Jelly?" "And are there ways," science asked, "in which Royal Jelly can be of benefit to humanity?" So, many experiments were made— and the results from external application were instantaneous and dramatic. New "bee creams" were put on the market at fabulous prices and became the sensation of two continents, But now comes the big news! COLONIAL DAMES, one of America's oldest and most reputable beauty laboratories. has produced a ROYAL BEE CREAM containing this Royal Jelly to sell for the excitingly low price of just $5 a jar. Among the results which you may expect are a clearer, brighter, more vital, younger look . . . a softening of fine lines . . . a more supple youthful skin feeling. Any of us would welcome this, wouldn't we?

We've other fabulous things for you to see in Walker's cosmetics department this coming week. Miss Anna Mae Rule is here to demonstrate LYDIA O'LEARY cosmetics. LYDIA O'LEARY was first to come up with a cosmetic to hide dark circles, blemishes, skin imperfections: the original Spotstik, the only beauty stick that's medically approvedand LYDIA O'LEARY Covermark that conceals birthmarks, scar tissue, all skin discolorations. You'll enjoy Miss Rule, a very interesting and educational person.

Also, Miss Ethel Meador, special beauty consultant with MAX FACTOR, will be at Walker's, too, this coming week to show you MAX FACTOR'S great new discovery SECRET KEY-that opens the way to new beauty for women with dry skin, oily skin or disturbed skin. I've heard about SECRET KEYit's wonderful.

So I'm proud to invite you to come in to Walker's cosmetic department this next week and see all the new. revolutionary things to make you look more beautiful.

MAX FACTOR'S

GREAT NEW DISCOVERY Opens the way to new beauty for women with dry skin, oily skin, disturbed

Your skin is dry. You use rich creams faithfully, yet there's no relief from flakiness.

WHY? Your skin is oily. You switch from one treatment preparation to another, yet blackheads and blemishes still persist.

BECAUSE! The answer is the same in either case, as Max Factor scientists have now proved. There's a chemical barrier in the skin which keeps creams and lotions "on the cutside looking in"—as though they were smoothed on glass! This barrier develops when skin lacks correct pH* balance and is either too acid or too alkaline.

WHAT? But now Max Factor has perfected the way to bring about normal acidity-alkaline balance characteristic of young skin . . . puts in your hands the SECRET KEY—a remarkable liquid which prepare the state of the pares your skin for treatment by breaking through the stubborn chemical barrier. The SECRET KEY now actually opens the way for treatment creams and lotions to do their beautifying work!

Having discovered the SECRET KEY, Max Factor has formulated exclusive corrective creams and lotions to follow right behind . . . complete beauty treatment groups for Dry Skin, for Oily Skin, for Disturbed Skin, for Normal Skin.

Among Career Women

March dinner meeting for the Medical Assistants of Long Beach was an affair of last Monday evening at the Victor Hugo. Heart Month (Febru-Hugo. Heart Month (February) still being fresh in mem ory, the appropriate guest speaker of the evening was Dr. Raymond Swinney, active for many years in the Heart Association work of this city.

His subject was entitled, "One to a Customer and No Spare Parts," and he treated his subject with humor and seriousness by turn, giving the Medical Assistants a hopeful picture of the dramatic heart treatment progress being made. President La Vonne Lynch was in charge of the evening and serving as hostesses for the affair were Suc Swinney, Florence Krell, Ruth Broad-bent and Barbara Porter.

Quite naturally, decorations for Monday's dinner followed the saucy $1. Patrick's theme and the tables were gay with the white and green of March, Many special guests were welcomed to the meeting in-cluding state president Mrs.

Chef of the Week

Dilday Presents Savory Barbecued Chicken Recipe

By MILDRED K. FLANARY Independent, Press-Telegram Home Economies

Noted for his friendliness and his ease of manner, Chef of the Week Robert F. Dilday is known to his brothers, Jack and Richard, as the greatest visitor in the world. In fact, they see to it that his pilgrimages downtown are made alone—they are so time consuming.

Born in Wichita, Kan., he chicken and curried rice.

came with his family to Long Beach at the age of 2, at which time his father started a business, known then as the Long Beach Funeral Home. Since 1939 it has been known as Dil-day Mortuary.

Fortunately for Bob, Long Long Beach in those days provided atmosphere dear to the Beart of a boy. The present Silverado Park area was a mass of willows and sloughs, int tempire with coverts with just teeming with coyotes, rab-bits and ducks. Hunting then, as it is now, was a challenge to his love for fishing. He holds a near Long Beach rec-bolds a near Long Beach rec-ord of three marlin in one season, each weighing more than 200 pounds.

Dilday also has an interest-ing past as a "horse trader."

Not horses, mind you, but of guns, boats and fishing equipment. His trading has provided him a rare collection of antique, or perhaps antiquated, guns. At one time he made his own ammunition for trying own ammunition for trying them out.

Dilday's career has been filled with civic activities, too.
He is president of the Independent Business Men's Assn. of Greater Long Beach, an organization composed of some 500 members, each pledged to bring more Navy personnel to Long Beach, and to make them bring more Navy personner to Long Beach, and to make them feel wanted and at home. He also presides over the Long Beach Funeral Directors Assn., is a past prexy of the New York and New Jersey State Societies, and of the Outboard Beating Cith of Long Beach. Societies, and of the Outboard Boating Club of Long Beach. A past toparch, Long Beach Pyramid of Sciots; he is a past commander, Sons of Union Veterans, his grandfather having fought in the Civil War. Socially, he is a member of the Tuna Club and serves on the board of directors of Long board of directors of Long Beach Yacht Club.

Stockings Echo Costume Color

Every sign of spring and summer fashion points to stockings as an important fashion accessory. The silhoutette has taken a new direction. The new long narrow line draws the eye downward to the shorter skirt—which is part of the pay long taxes silpart of the new long torso sil-houette—giving stockings new value as costume co-ordinates.

'55 fashion also endorses the exciting "one-colour" theme of costume and accessories blended together in monochromatic effect. To carry this "one-col-our" look through from hemline to shoe, stockings must echo the color of the costume, so labeling the "bare-leg" look and the "go-with-everything' stocking color defintely passe!

Walking Relaxes Mind, Body

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Why Grow Old?

Time was when nearly everyone dressed up and went for a stroll down the street to see and to be seen. Our fathers called it a "constitutional" and believed that it then them in good health and in good spirits, and it did!

It stimulated their circulation, kept them in touch with the flow of life and was convivial. It combined the benefits of physical exercise and psychosomatic medicine as we know it today.

The exercise you get doing your housework, pushing a cart about a supermarket or strugabout a supermarket or strug-gling at a bargain counter, does not bring you the same dividends. Walking outdoors can do wonders for you. It is relaxing. It clears your mind as well as your lungs and also gets you away from the tyranny of the telephone, tele-vision, radio and myriad duties and interruptions at home. No matter how important or valuable these may be it is restful to get away from them once

Often when we feel tired or irritable, a walk can make all of the difference in the world. We come back feeling like a new person! A change of scene is good and the fresh air and exercise even better. However, today few people walk for the sake of walking except in our big cities.
If you live in or near a small fown you are apt to hop into your car to go a block to mail a letter or to buy a tube of toothpaste. On the other hand those who live in a large city are likely to combine walking with window shopping.

Whenever the weather per-

Whenever the weather perwhenever the weather permits, see to it that you get in at least a 30-minute walk. Even in cold weather if you are properly wrapped up from head to toe you can have the loveliest and most stimulating walks of all.

Announce Music Week Observance

"Making Music Enriches Life" will be the keynote of the 32nd annual observance of Music Week to be celebrated this year May 1 to 8. An extra day has been added so that the observance of Mother's Day may be combined with Music Week.

More than 3,300 communities throughout the country are expected to take part in local events marking the occasion. Special attention this year will be given to American music.

Last year, according to T. E.

Rivers of the National Rec-reation Association, 44 gover-nors and hundreds of mayors through proclamations and special statements called attention to the Music Week pro-gram. President Eisenhower wrote a warm letter of approval commending particularly the many efforts to draw servicemen and women into the activities, both as audience and as participants. Rivers serves as secretary of the National and Inter-American Music Week Committee. FOR TOTS TO TEENS WHO DESERVE THE BEST WARREN

Governors of all states as well as of Alaska, the Canal Zone, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are members of the Honorary Committee for Music Week.

Speaking of the aims and achievements of Music Week,

New Designs for Dollar-Minded Miss

By MARY HARTMANN

High fashion and the low clothes budget were introduced to each other by Suzy Perette a few years back, and they've been going steady ever

It is the conviction of Sidney Blauner, Perette's young president, that "the American woman has good taste, an inwoman has good taste, an instinct toward quality, a determination to keep her youth and a spirit of adventure in regard to fashion changes when they are within her means." As a result the clothes developed by designer Evelyn Dawson to bear the Perette label this spring 1955 reflect as much style excitement as any much style excitement as any haute couture collection can boast, they illustrate the fabric news of the moment, and even display the luxurious "little things" that make style head-lines—all at a dollar-minded level that is news in itself.

The Perette Princesse sil-houette, flaring full over Pellon from a gored, unbelted waistline and a smoothly waistine and a smoothly turned, high bosomed yoke, this season shares attention with a new member of the family, the Prince silhouette. Straight and slim, but curvaceous, too, the Prince appears in all and warring my turnes of in silk and worsted mixtures of charcoal grey or black lighted up with rich little collars of lace or Irish crochet, and again in cotton tweed or silk taffeta.
The "white collar girl" a la

Suzy Perette is a creature of glamour indeed, for the white collar and cuffs of spring 1955 may appear on a neat little of-fice dress of black pesantetype fabric, or in fluted white linen on a flaring dress of navy silk shantung that could go serencly to a first night.

A new dress for every party lies in the realm of possibility at Suzy Perette prices, but the dresses shown in this group make an equally good argument for being worn until they are threadbare—they are all designed with figure alignment, complexion tints and general belie-of-the-ball allure in mind. The long torso is emphasized, with full skirts kept slim through the hips and the neckline gracefully contoured to play up, without pointing up, the bosom, Silk-and-cotton mixtures touched with gold mixtures touched with good and jewel embroidery, and silk taffeta in dark colors with cleaming bands of shirring to make a dramatic outline, are two contrasting themes.

Action Still Talks Much Louder Than Precepts Do

By ANGELO PATRI

If you wanted a child to acquire a good habit that he might learn a good way of life you would not hope to succeed by teaching him the opposite idea, now would you? Yet somehow we do manage to make that mistake.

A mother teaches her child to be kind and gentle and never, never injure another child, bird or beast. And one day when she takes this child out shopping he sees a toy pistol and begs for it. His mother buys the one or maybe the pair he points out and he swaggers out of the shop a happy child. If his mother could see how that child's face had changed from what it was when he entered the shop she would not be so pleased.

Every parent wants his child to be recognized by and as a lady or gentleman of culture, well mannered and of a pleasant personality. He knows that good reading is one of the best possible forces to get to play on the child's intelligence toward that end. One day his toward that end. One day his child asks for a quarter. "What for?" "I want to buy a hook." "What book?" "The new Comic." The youngster gets the Comic. Dad and mother are too busy to see that this Comic is loaded with evil. What ideas will that book teach? Gentle manners and a pleasing persenality?

There are few parents who would not say that they want-one are two parents who would not say that they wanted their child to be honest, to keep his word once given and to search for truth in all his walks through life. Of course. knows that he is not going to do this because it will cost too much money or take too much time but he says, "Of course. Sure, sure," and then

"What a crust Like fun I'm doing that." "But you promised." "What could I do? I'll get out of it all right."

The long and the short of it is that what we do talks much louder than what we say. To really teach children the bet-ter way of life we must first believe in it so firmly that we cannot forget to abide by it. If we believed firmly that good books, good manners, honest dealing were the best in daily practice we would not teach them in reverse.

Self discipline is mighty difficult for most of us but a bit of it is essential if we would children what we be-

The hand was easier to bid than to play. South would have had no problem if his queen of clubs had been the queen of diamonds. The trouble was that South had too much of his strength in the wrong places.

West opened the three of hearts, East put up the jack, and South had to win at once with the king. The contract now depended on bringing in the diamonds before the opponents could run the hearts.

It was clear that South had to finesse for the queen of diamonds. The trouble was, king. It was important to take the king of diamonds on the third round of the suit, preferably having previously taken a successful finesse.

South couldn't afford, there-fore, to lay down the ace of diamonds and then lead the jack. West might think of covering with the queen, and then the fat would be in the fire. If West were allowed to take the queen of diamonds, he would take four heart tricks at once; and if dumny won with the king the diamonds would be blocked.

The solution to the problem was very simple. At the second trick, South led the ten of diamonds. Perhaps West should have looked at this card with deep suspicion, but the truth is that he didn't. He was a support to the control of the control unhesitatingly played low, and South let the ten of diamonds

Jimmy Stewart: 'Play together'

by LLOYD SHEARER

PARADE'S WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

HOLLYWOOD.

Whenever the movie colony here is singled out as a brazen, reckless community—which is practically every Sunday—it refutes the charge by offering Jimmy Stewart and his family in evidence.

This is truly one of the happiest and best adjusted families anywhere. None of its members ever has been soiled by the slightest touch of scandal. None has had to visit a psychiatrist, a police judge or a child psychologist. And none has been known to get a swelled head because Daddy happens to be a star.

In a community of money-chasing, neurosis and envy, how have the Stewarts managed to achieve outstanding happiness?

According to Jimmy, there are two answers: "One is that I'm a small-town guy, with small-town values, who raises his family on small-town ideals. The other is that I believe very strongly in the corny old adage, 'A family that plays together stays together.'"

Jim's family consists of his wife, Gloria, whom he married in 1949, two stepsons. Ronnie, 10, and Mike, 8, and a pair of 3-year-old twin daughters, Kelly and Judy. In line with Daddy's beliefs, the members of this family spend as much time as possible playing together.

Jim, for example, likes to fish on his days off, but he won't go unless he can take the two boys along. Nor will he attend a football or baseball game unless Gloria and the boys go too.

BASKETBALL: Michael (I.) and Ronald gang up on that old playmaker—Daddy.

Four years ago, Jim was offered a flattering deal to make a film, No Highway in the Sky, in England. (His current release, incidentally, is The Far Country.) He accepted, but only on the proviso that his wife and boys be taken along.

"Why do you have to drag the whole family with you?" he was asked.

"I didn't get married," Jim answered, "to get away from family life!"

On his days off from the studio, Jim, flanked by Ronnie and Mike, proudly excorts Kelly and Judy up and down streets of Beverly Hills. Other movie stars may consider this unmanly, but not Jim. He pushes the strollers with genuine glee, races after the twins when they switch to their tricycles—and all the time carries on a conversation with Ronnie and Mike.

When the twins are ready for their nap, Jim and the boys get up a basketball game among themselves, or Jim may suggest a hike up Santa Monica Canyon. They're great hikers. They will climb a mountain one week, bury a golf tee or a flashlight on the crest, then climb hack the following week to see if they can find their buried treasure. Mother goes along on these hikes, but usually drops out at the foot of the mountain. She prefers Saturday family picnics at the beach.

Jim also joins the boys in the imaginative games all youngsters think up. In cowboys-and-Indians, he always is the Indian; in Superman, the villain. Of late, however, the boys have permitted him to be one of the "good guys"—but only because he's spent an hour or two after work each day helping them erect a fort in the back yard. "It's a pretty good fort, too," Jim points out. "It has slots for guns and flags and everything."

Jim is one of the wealthiest stars in Hollywood, but he was born and reared in Indiana, Pa. (pop. 11,743), where his father still runs a hardware store. As a youngster, he attended the Presbyterian Church, joined the Boy Scouts, took accordion lessons, helped out in the family store and nearly broke his neck trying to invent an airplane. From his father, to whom he still turns for advice—although he's 46—he learned all the small-town virtues and pleasures. He's determined to teach them to his children.

"The best way to do it is to play with your kids down through the years," he claims. "One of the tragedies of this day and age is that many parents spend the best years of their lives earning a living for children they never really get to know.

"If there's anything I've learned as a father, it's that there's no substitute for family togetherness."

MOST FAMILIES have a formula for happiness—a special activity, a favorite place, a saying handed down through generations, an unusual philosophy of life. What is yours? PARADE will pay $100 for each story of a family used in Parade Families. They must be true accounts from your own experience, submitted in typewritten form along with a photograph of the family. Length: 300 to 750 words. Manuscripts cannot be acknowledged or returned. Send to Parade Families, Paradde, 285 Madison Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

New idea in writing....

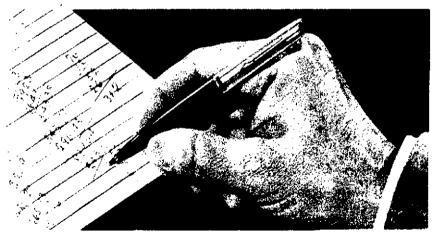

For quick notes or leisured longhand, this first combination of its kind features Parker's Electro-Polished fountain pen and Jotter ball point.

Parker set fills every need, sells for $895 and up

THE PEN. Famous Parker "51" Fountain Pen with the new mirror-smooth Electro-Polished point is the smoothest-writing pen ever made. Its sensitive point records all the character of your writing, lends a truly personal touch to your correspondence. The two-finger filling is simplicity itself, takes in almost twice the ink similarly priced pens do.

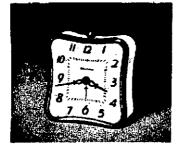

THE JOTTER ball point. The new Parker "51" Jotter, designed for fast figuring and detail work, writes nearly 400,000 words with a single cartridge, saves cost and nuisance of frequent refills. Points are available in four sizes: broad, medium, fine, extra fine. "51" Jotter has no telltale ball point button, the sliding cap extends and retracts the point.

Never before—at any price—could you purchase a set like this! Here, for the first time, the two leading writing instruments of their kind are brought together to form the one truly modern writing combination.

With this new Parker "Smart Sei" you have all the writing equipment you'll ever need. The beautiful smooth-writing Electro-Polished Parker Fountain Pen for personal letters . . . the sleek, long-writing Parker Jotter ball point for quick notes and figuring.

See the new Parker "Smart Set" at your favorite pen counter today! Choose from 4 new models. $8.95 up. The Parker Pen Company, Janesville, Wisconsin, U.S.A.; Toronto, Canada.

A BUCK IN LUCK

CRESTVIEW, FLA.

Crewmen of an Air Force rescue boat from Eglin Field here recently made their oddest rescue to date: an eight point buck, which they came upon swimming a mile off shore (left).

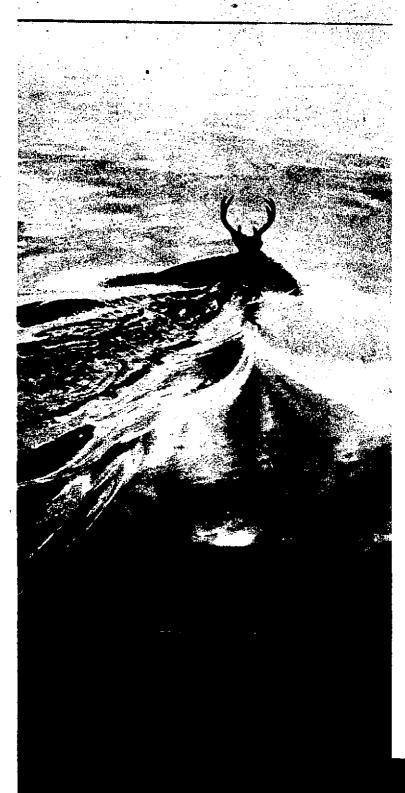

Evidently frightened by something on land, it had plunged in and headed southeast for Cuba, 600 miles away. By night, thanks to the gallant airmen, it was back on land, headed north.

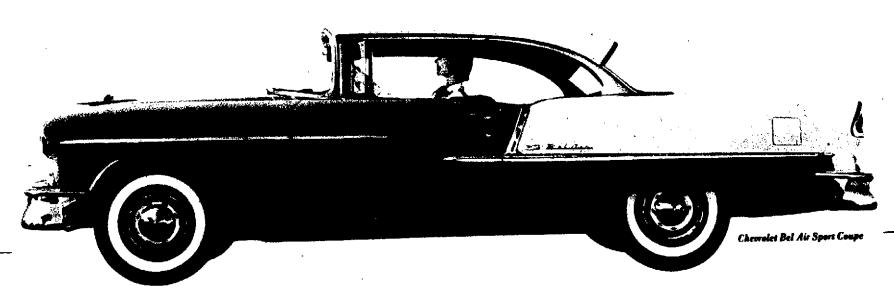

LASSOED buck is hauled protesting up to deck by ropes wrapped around body.

With a view to giving you— high style and high power in every price class

WHICHEVER General Motors car you and your budget prefer—Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick or Cadillac—you're certain to enjoy the highest style, the highest power, the highest performance—yes, and the most comfort and safety—that modern automotive science and creative genius can put into a motorcar.

This may mean such a smart touch as the slant of a windshield—or the way a top flows into the rear deck. It may mean the tremendously important fact that your engine gives you rich reserve power when you need it—that your GM automatic transmission pours V8 power more smoothly to the wheels.

But—add it all up—and, as a visit to your dealer will prove—you're certain to find that the key to a General Motors car is—by all odds—your key to greater value.

The President's

PET PEEVES

He doesn't blow up often-but when that jaw sets, watch out

by JACK ANDERSON and FRED BLUMENTHAL

WASHINGTON,

Not long ago a White House guest, winking roguishly, told President Eisenhower an off-color story. Anger surged up Ike's neck and flooded his face. He botted from his chair. "I must say," he snapped, "that is out of place!"

Like any President, Dwight Eisenhower is human; like any human, he blows up occasionally. And few things make him angrier than a smutty story.

This is typical of the man who, more than any other, bears the weight of the free world on his shoulders. He is seldom irked by the big problems he faces every day. But some minor irritation is apt to trigger his temper.

Then his face clouds; his eyes turn cold; his jaw stiffens. He explodes audibly, the words flying like shrapnel. Sometimes he flies out of his chair. But the outburst is short and quickly forgotten.

Most of the time, the President is as lively and buoyant as a Colorado mountain stream. His grin is infectious, his laugh uproarious. Slow to anger, livid when aroused, quick to regain his composure—this is Eisenhower.

Keep It Boiled Down

What gets his dander up? PARADE cornered a dozen of Ike's intimates to find out.

Ike won't swear in public or around women, no matter what the provocation, though in stag company the Army in him sometimes crops out. He is scrupulously careful, however, not to degrade his office. "Don't take yourself seriously," is his favorite saying.

The President expects his subordinates to be concise and accurate. If they ramble, he becomes irritated. He prefers oral briefings and insists on boiled-down reports. Said one White House aide: "If you want to commit suicide, bring him a lengthy report and call it a brief."

Eisenhower often refers to his office as "the maelstrom." Once, after signing a mountain of papers, he was about to head for the golf course when an aide rushed up with more papers. That was the last straw. Ike almost chewed off the aide's car (but later apologized).

At first the President balked over interrupting his work to receive the "must see" visitors. Now he seems almost to enjoy these interludes. But he gets annoyed at anyone who wangles an appointment by saying he represents some public cause, then takes advantage of the opening to sell lke a bill of goods or seek a favor.

Ike won't tolerate backbiting or talebearing. He is impatient over "boners," particularly those that hit the headlines. When his top policymakers were quoted in newspapers with conflicting statements about the atomic bomb, he lectured them as if they were errant school children.

Ike's own relations with the press, strained at first, have improved under the expert hand of press secretary Jim Hagerty. But a loaded question at a press conference will still raise angry wrinkles on his face. Once, when a reporter needled him about Senator McCarthy, a flush rose up Ike's collar. He glared angrily for a moment, then called for the next question.

The most anger he has ever shown at a press conference was over a question hinting that he had once been close to Alger Hiss. Before the question was half out, lke thundered: "What did you say? What did you say?"

But nothing grates his temper worse than a "news leak." When a columnist published his private notes on the farm problem, it upset the tranquility of the White House for days.

Eisenhower doesn't like to hold still for prolonged picture-taking. As one White House cameraman puts it: "We keep shooting until we notice a cloud come across his face. When he changes from a smiling President to a grim President, we just leave."

It doesn't take much, however, to dispel the cloud. Once, after the President had endured a seige of bursting flashbulbs, a photographer shouted:

"Hold it a minute!" Ike scowled. "Why are you so slow?" he demanded. "Mr. President," the cameraman said, "I'm a perfectionist." The grim President changed to a smiling President.

Ike grows dour when he misses a golf shot or muffs a bridge play. On the golf course, he frowns on idle chatter or business talk. If his companions have anything to say, it had better be about the game. Otherwise, they'll be cut short with a stare.

At the bridge table, he doesn't hide his annoyance over foolish plays. In one game, Ike's partner led the wrong card. Snapped lke: "Good heavens, when you lead a card, you have to know where you are coming from and where you expect to arrive."

Other little things that irk the Presi-

He doesn't like to struggle into starchy, formal clothes.

He gets fed up at times with the public spotlight. After reading news accounts of his dysentery attack in April, 1953, he complained: "Gosh, I can't even have a bellyache in private!"

He doesn't like to be pushed into hasty decisions. He stiffens when anyone pressures him.

He grows restless on long airplane flights, takes frequent walks to the cockpit, peers out the windows.

He frets over the constant security on his movements. "All this confinement gets on my nerves at times," he told a recent visitor.

Danger Signals

When a presidential storm is brewing, Ike flashes danger signals that White House aides now recognize. If he wipes his hand slowly across his mouth or fidgets with the cap on his front tooth, it's a sign his patience is waning. Sometimes he jumps up and starts pacing the floor (though he does this, too, when in deep thought). Or, if he doodles absently, it usually means he's bored.

"It's not what he says that lets you know he's angry. It's the look on that face of his," an aide told PARADE. "All the President's emotions are right on the surface. You can see them in his face as he changes moods."

Of course, Ike's warm grin with the characteristic crinkling around his eyes is more familiar around the White House than his frown. His laughter is heard more often than an outburst of temper. For, as Ike himself says, anger wastes too much energy.

PRESIDENTIAL TEMPERS THROUGH U.S. HISTORY

GEORGE WASHINGTON: Most biographers praise his self-control, but Thomas Jefferson said: "His temper was irritable and high-toned, If it broke its bonds, he was most tremendous in his wrath..."

ANDREW JACKSON: Once, the recoil from his gun knocked him flat. Bristling, Jackson got up and shouted: "By God, if anyone laughs, I'll kill him!"

ABRAHAM LINCOLN: He blew off steam only occasionally. But Lincoln once shouted at a persistent visitor: "Go away, go away! I cannot attend to all these details. I could as easily bail out the Potomac with a teaspoon!"

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT: He was particularly sensitive about his leg braces. After they came unlocked at one public function, FDR confided to staff members: "I was the damnedest, maddest man you ever saw."

HARRY TRUMAN: His celebrated temper flared in many ways, letter-writing, the use of sally language, etc. He reacted less to criticism of himself than of his close associates, and particularly of his wife and daughter. The latter, he maintained, were not in politics—so he never completely forgave what he regarded as slurs against either of them.

New Rinso Blue washes whiter -because it blues as it washes

Guens which girl washed her coveralls with IUNSO BLUE! (The one on the right.)

New sky-blue detergent gets your wash whiter—because it blues as it washes! Unless your present detergent does that—it's doing only half the job.

PINSO BLUE does so many different jobs, and does them all so brilliantly, that it honestly makes other detergents seem obsolete. Listen to this:

- 1. RINSO BLUE actually blues as it washes. As a result, sheets, shirts, pillowcases—yes, even rayon and nylon clothes—come out cleaner and whiter, your colored clothes brighter. And you don't need to add any bluing!
- We developed this new RINSO formula to give you the cleaning power to get clothes really clean and white in your washer.
- 3. RINSO BLUE dissolves instantly, even in the hardest water—makes rich suds that float out grimiest dirt, even from soiled work clothes. Yet it's safe for your finest lingerie.
- 4. It's delightfully mild. That's why so many gals also use RINSO BLUE for doing dishes. It cuts grease like crazy—leaves glasses sparkling. And you don't need to dry!

Lever Brothers unconditionally guarantees new RINSO BLUE, just as we have always guaranteed Rinso soap in the green box. If you don't agree that RINSO BLUE is a big improvement on the detergent you are now using, we'll gladly refund your money.

▶ Above all, remember this: RINSO BLUE gets your clothes extra white because it blues as it washes. Unless your present detergent does that—it's doing only half the job!

What do

Money? A place to live?

The minute you left home to stay, something happened to your parents. Perhaps you got a job out of town, married, set up your own household and didn't notice the subtle changes in your father and mother.

But, when you left, they became "unemployed." Unless they had younger children still to rear, their job as parents was done. To the average American mother, this happens when she is 47 years old; to the average father, when he is 50. Yet at the half-century mark each of them can look forward to 15, 20, 25 or more fruitful years of life.

It was different 100 years ago. The average man was lucky to survive past middle age. And, in 1855, two or three generations were likely to live in the same farmhouse, work in the same fields. As industrial cities changed the face of America, more and more young adults were separated from their parents. Now, an estimated seven out of 10 parents live away from their children.

These 1955 "facts of life" are at the core of a basic and growing problem.

Your parents, whether they live one block or a thousand miles away, still are your parents. You remain tied to them emotionally. They worry about you and you about them. They may intrude themselves into your life without meaning to; they may create situations in day-to-day living that sooner or later prove painful for all concerned.

Your Big Problem

Of course, you do not want to hurt them. But you have a life of your own. You have, or probably will have, children of your own. Providing for and attending to the needs of your own household, your own social life, is just about a full-time job. You have the future to consider. Yet you do not want to neglect your own father and mother.

Inevitably, "middle-generation" children ask: Exactly what do I owe my parents? Am I doing the right thing for them-or the wrong?

PARADE took these questions to authorities—doctors, social scientists, family relations experts. Their answers are more important now than ever before, if only because America now has a record number of people 65 and older (14,000,000), with more to come.

What ahout money? Often you hear that young people lack moral fiber because they do not support their parents financially. Actually, many experts believe that financial support once was the primary # you owe your parents?

Constant attention? Experts give the answers that every young adult wants to know responsibility of grown children-but is no longer.

Miss Offic Randall, of the Community Service Society of New York, feels that the realities of living today prevent young people, in most cases, from bearing much of the financial burden. She points out that this function is being taken over by Social Security, Old Age Insurance and other benefit payments. Today's young family is geared toward bringing up its children so they can be independent, leave home later and seek the best opportunities, according to Dr. W. E. Moore of Princeton University. He adds that a young adult's unwillingness to make serious financial sacrifices for his parents does not spell moral decay in our young people; actually, such sacrifices might jeopardize their responsibilities to themselves and their children.

In other words, it isn't that a young person doesn't want to help his parents financially. He is simply unable to. When more parents and children recognize' this, there will be fewer frustrated children and fewer resentful parents.

Clark Tibbitts, chairman of the Committee on Aging and Geriatrics (U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare), points out: If it comes to a choice between maintaining the health of your parents or that of your children, your first responsibility is to your children.

The No. 1 joh: But your biggest responsibility is to understand the needs of your parents and do things that enable them to meet those needs so they can live full, well-rounded lives past middle age, says Tibbitts.

Certainly old people want and need affection, understanding and respect. But most of them want to be self-sufficient and spend their days in a worthwhile manner, he points out. Anything you can do to help your parents to live their own lives, to "be themselves," is most important.

If an aging parent wants to work, you will help him by encouraging him, inquiring about job possibilities and perhaps even sounding out a few personnel managers. If the parent is lonely, you can "point" him in the direction of people with similar interests or to social situations which might end the loneliness.

Similarly, if the parent simply wants to grow flowers and vegetables in his garden, you should encourage him and take an interest in that activity.

Tibbitts maintains that your attitudes determine whether you will help or hurt your parent. You must realize that most older people are capable of thinking clearly, learning, sharing in responsibilities and participating in a wide range of activities. It's vital to encourage your parent to do something, anything, which he feels is worthwhile.

"Overprotecting" parents by making them feel they are invalids to be nursed and coddled can actually cause them to be sick. The old saying, "you've earned your rest," has done more harm than good, says

What if parents interfere? Most people have had some experience with the ruckus that can be caused by a grandmother who feels that her daughter-in-law does not know how to raise the children and says so.

The best remedy, says Miss Randall, is to keep cool, use reason, listen to criticism-and accept it if it's good. But, if you disagree, put your foot down and point out that you are going to raise the youngsters your way. In addition, try to convince your parent that "your way" is based on sound thinking.

Use Your Judgment

After all, many grandmothers these days are between 40 and 50. They're open to suggestion. You might suggest that grandmother read about, or otherwise bone up on, your method of raising youngsters.

Seek information from parents, Miss Randall advises, but indicate delicately that the advice may or may not be used-according to your own judgment.

If a parent gets sick: There are two middle-generation attitudes particularly destructive to the well-being of parents, says Dr. Maurice Linden, director, Division of Mental Health, Philadelphia Department of Health.

First, when a parent complains of feeling ill, there are children who say or think: "Forget about it; you're always beefing." Fortunately this attitude is infrequent. Second, there is the child who is oversolicitous and overindulgent. This type magnifies his parent's complaint: he becomes terribly disturbed and thus helps make the parent sicker than he really is. Such concern normally arises from sincere, deep emotions -hut, unfortunately, it can do harm.

Both these attitudes, says Dr. Linden, should be replaced by a reasonable, calm, casual assurance that proper medical attention will yield good results. For altogether too many children feel illnesses of the aged cannot be relieved. Thus they do not encourage their parents to seek early treatment-before a disorder becomes really serious.

PARENTS CONTINUED

WORK: Sewing consumes some of the time on their hands. Contrary to wide belief, many aging persons can do a good job in a variety of fields.

There's a right way and a wrong way to visit, write and give gifts to your mother and father

When their last child leaves home, says Dr. Linden, some parents feel abandoned. This usually will not be a problem to the parent who is busy and continues to expand his interests.

However, children can help any parent by not pitying him or hovering about before leaving home. Overindulgence only tends to plant the idea among parents that they are actually being abandoned.

If you live together: A young couple in Washington, D.C., tell of the husband's 75-year-old mother who lives with them and makes their lives miserable. What should they and others in the same boat do?

Says Dr. Edward J. Stieglitz, Washington authority on the aged: "It is possible, but not probable, that married children and parents can live happily in the same home.

"The psychological price paid for living together far exceeds the financial price of supporting two households. It would be preferable if parents could live in quarters adjacent to, but not in, the children's home."

Clark Tibbitts suggests that if it is absolutely necessary for parents and children to "double up," they should try taking vacations from each other periodically. The children might go to a resort while the parents go to an old-age home—or to another resort.

In addition, middle-generation children might consider hiring "parent-sitters" now and again, who would stay with aged parents as baby-sitters do. This would give the children a chance to enjoy evenings out with their friends. Both methods are used successfully in England.

How can you show your feelings? Nothing has greater emotional value than an actual visit to the home of your parent or of them to yours, says Dr. Wilma Donahue of the University of Michigan Institute for Human Adjustment. She advises:

Visits—and Letters

"Plan your visits carefully. Have some idea of what activities the older people will enjoy most. If you are a daughter, don't go home and start cleaning the house. Your mother will be insulted. Just good old-fashioned family visits can be very rewarding, especially if you have kept up on each other's interests."

If you live a few hundred miles from your parents, the best-and cheapest-way to keep abreast of their interests is to write letters, of course. Dr. Donahue suggests these general rules for letter-writing:

Save your criticism until you see your parents face to face. Keep on a positive note. An occasional expression of affection—as simple as "I wish you could have been with us last night"—gives parents a feeling of great security.

Don't write once-a-week or once-a-month "duty" letters. Write when you have something to say. Talk about the music lessons for Johnnie or the new electric stove or improvements planned for the house. Such "news" letters give parents a feeling of participation in your lives. Through letters, let your parents share your friends. Describe "Dorothy and George." If you like them, your parents probably will too.

Don't restrict gift-giving only to holidays like Christmas. Send simple gifts every so often, says Dr. Donahue—even when there is no special occasion. However, every family has special days in its history—days when something important happened. Remember them with a gift or a special letter. These recall big things in the lives of your parents—just as you will have similar events in your own lives.

A Community Duty

Prof. Ernest Burgess, of the University of Chicago, stresses that successful relations of parents and middle-generation children seem to be based on "each living their own lives, but maintaining mutually satisfying contacts."

A final obligation: Tibbitts feels strongly that children owe it to all concerned to go out in the community and plump for facilities—day center, recreational, hospital—for the aged. In his opinion, this is both a civic and a personal duty.

He relates the story of a woman who called him recently, saying that her 79-year-old father who lived with her just sat in a rocker all day. He had nothing to do.

"That woman should go out, find other people who have the same problem and form a club—to see that their aged parents have something to do," Tibbetts says firmly.

"Schools and churches," he adds, "have a lot of 'empty time.' Why shouldn't community organizations use those facilities as centers for the aging?"

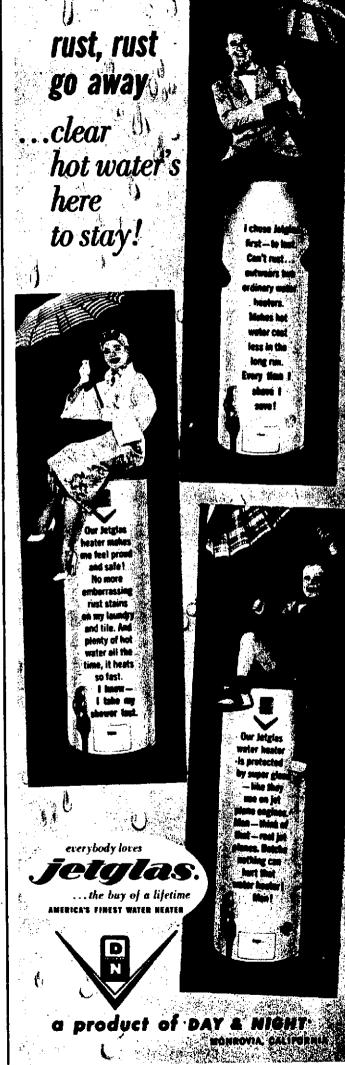

This, then, is what you owe your parents: understanding, support, respect and awareness of what it takes to live well-rounded lives beyond the middle years.

Of course, the obligation is not all onesided. Parents owe themselves a lot, too. They need a purpose in old age more important than mere survival, says Dr. Stieglitz. And they need a personality mature enough to accept reality including inevitable handicaps.

He adds that the experiences of the aging have taught them to accept unpleasant limitations, to roll with the punches of life.

"The true tragedy of old age," he declares, "is not being old, but being too young (immature) when old. We can help people to mature, not just merely age."

This, too, you owe your parents.

FOREIGN DOGS

are moving in

From faraway places come strange-sounding breeds

Just as the human population of America has been drawn from many lands, so with the nation's dogs. On PARADE's cover today is a striking example: Princess Yun-Nan, a rare Chinese Crested dog owned by Colleen Clancy of Glendale, Calif. This small, grey-hound-like breed originated in China and Tibet, but is no longer found there. But for America, it might well die out.

Meanwhile, our dog fanciers increasingly are taking up such "foreigners" as Italian Greyhounds, Japanese Spaniels, Welsh Corgies, Scottish Deerhounds and Siberian Huskies, along with such exotically named breeds as Pulik, Kuvaszok, Rottweiler. Affenpinscher and Basenji. Still other "immigrants" are pictured on these pages.

Some of them have mushroomed in popularity in recent years. American Kennel Club registration figures show Chihuahuas rising from 20,331 to 24,033 just between 1953 and 1954; Keeshonds, from 383 to 521; Puliks (central European sheepdogs), from 82 to 136.

With it all, red-blooded 100 per cent American dogs still account for the vast majority of our estimated 22,500,-000 canine population. One good reason: they're a lot cheaper to buy, own and have fun with.

These are some of our popular canine 'immigrants'

DUTCH PUG, originally from China, came here via England, to which it was brought by Dutch East India traders. Once the favorite pet of Dutch and English nobility, it now has 2,359 entries registered with the American Kennel Chub. Cost: $100 to $300 apiece.

BRUSSELS GRIFFIN, from Belgium, weighs only 7 to 11 pounds. Belgions call it "the delightful little street urchin." There are now 124 registered with the American Kennel Club. No beauties, but with lively personalities, they sell for up to $200 each.

SALUKI, from Arabia, also is called "Royal Dog of Egypt" and is reputed to be the oldest existing breed domesticated by man. Once used to hunt gazelles, they can run up to 50 mph, hurdle 8-ft. obstacles. Good specimens cost $500 and up.

KEESHONDS, from Holland, first came to U.S. in late 1850s, got their name from Dutch patriot Kees de Gyselaer. Wolf-gray in color and appearance, they actually are mild-mannered; Dutch call them "ideal companion dog." Cost: from $100 to $200.

LMASA APSO, from Tibet, was known in 1583 as a prized gift from Dalai Lama to imperial families during Manchu Dynasty. Only 68 are registered in U.S.; they self for up to $450. Related types, all also from Tibet, include terrier, toy spaniel, toy mastiff.

CHMUAHUA, mentioned by Columbus (who told the King of Spain he found one in Cuba), is most popular of odd foreign varieties now found here. They are said to go back to time of Montezuma. Over 24,000 are in United States. Cost: $50 to $200.

Postmarks for Prayer

Rep. Rabaut wants every letter to symbolize U.S. faith

by MARY VAN RENSSELAER THAYER

The 68-year-old, white-haired Congressman below is a man with a mission: to make Americans conscious of the Godly foundation upon which the nation rests. Michigan Representative Louis Rabaut was both an altar boy and a choir boy, still is often called "The Choir Boy of Capitol Hill." He is devoutly religious himself, and three of his daughters are nuns and one son a priest.

In the last Congress, Rep. Rabaut scored two victories. His bill to add the phrase "under God" to the Pledge of Allegiance was signed by President Eisenhower. With other Congressmen, Rep. Rabaut recited the amended pledge for the first time that afternoon. And, at his urging, the Post Office issued 3-cent and 8-cent "Statue of Liberty" stamps bearing, for the first time in U.S. history, the words "In God We Trust."

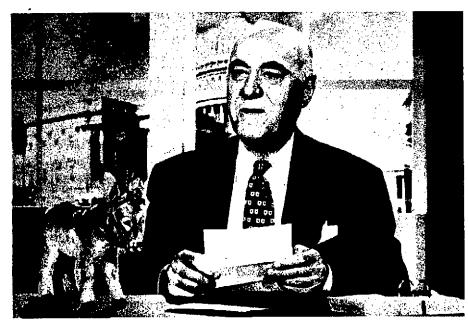

But the Congressman also suffered a mild setback. He sponsored a bill to authorize a special Post Office cancellation with the message, "Pray for Peace." The House passed the measure unanimously. But in the rush to adjourn, the Senate overlooked the measure.

When the present Congress convened in January, the Michigan Democrat decided no last-minute scramble would postpone his bill this time. He introduced it on the second day of the session, and Congressional observers feel that the measure is on its way to unanimous passage by both Houses.

The bill is a direct outgrowth of Rcp. Rabaut's service on the House Appropriations Committee, which must examine large sums spent for defense. Constantly facing the prospect of war, the Congressman has become an earnest advocate of peace.

"We have tried without success every method known to man to attain peace," he says. "Why not turn to God? We ought to remember Him. For in many ways since the founding of our nation, He has blessed us abundantly.

"'Pray for Peace' as a cancellation will go far in expressing our attitude of dependence on the Supreme Being, and our striving for a true 'Peace in Our Time.'"

'CHOIR BOY' Rabaut still sings in church choir, often solos at Congressional functions.

The lucky winner of this big treasure chest will have enough silver dollars for a new car, or enough for a trip around the world, or even enough for a down payment on a new home. Here's a prize well worth winning and the contest is so easy to enter.

There's nothing to buy. All you do is identify the man behind the O'Sullivan Cushion Tread Heels in the picture below. There are plenty of clues to help you guess his name. When you have decided who he is, simply write a last line for the jingle. It's easy. It's fun. Hurry! Send in your entry today.

Dimensions of chest: 10th high, 14th long, holding 145 lhs. of silver dollars. Full to overflowing just as pictured here.

NAME THE MAN BEHIND THE

O'Sullivan's

CLUES: Best known as a dramatic actor, he started on Broadway as a combination vocalist-saxophonist-comedian when he appeared with the "Collegians" in shows such as "Roberta." His first motion picture lead was opposite Claudette Colbert in "The Gilded Lily." He played a leading role in the "Caine Mutiny" and will soon co-star in "The Far Horizons," a Paramount picture in Vista Vision, color by Technicolor. Because acting keeps him on his feet a great portion of the time, he always wears O'Sullivan Cushion Treads, the world's most comfortable heels.

IMPORTANT: When you have identified the man behind the O'Sullivan heels, write a last line for the following single:

Women are born higher and wiser'

—and if that statement puzzles you, consider these frank, thoughtful and possibly prejudiced words . . .

by JUNE HAVOC

LEADING LADY of half a dozen Broadway shows, June Havoc currently is the star of Willy, a TV situation comedy (CBS-TV, Saturdays). The opinions she expresses in this little essay are her Recently I was speaking to my sister, Gypsy Rose Lee, who is a very wise cookic indeed.

"Gypsy," I said, "while you finish combing your hair would you like to have me tell you some decisions I've reached on men and women and maybe Life with a capital L?"

"Yes," said Gypsy.

"Well, I've concluded that women are born higher and wiser than men," I said.

What do you mean, 'higher'?" asked Gypsy, which rather surprised me, because Gypsy is smart enough to know what I mean, or anyone else.

"I mean higher like you get high on a drink," I said. "Women are born more enthusiastic, less stuffy, less sedate. They see things with sharper eyes than men and the things they see seem brighter. And of course everyone knows that women are born wiser than men.".

"Of course," said Gypsy.

"Ah!" I cried, "but it goes beyond that. A girl becomes a woman-by the way, a lot of girls never do - when she understands a) that she is invariably wiser than a man and b) that she must do everything possible to keep the man from knowing this. In other words, a woman has grown up and become an adult when she has become wise enough to let men think they are wiser."

Gypsy nodded.

"Only the other day." I said, "I was talking these things over with April." [Almost everyone is completely astonished to learn that Miss Havoc has a 19-year-old daughter.]

"I told her that not only is she smarter than any man she'll ever meet-and I mean smarter in every sense of the word-but she'll never learn very much about life from men. I look back on my own life and I am convinced that everything I learned I have learned from women, either by talking to them directly or by watching their reactions to the various situations life puts us in.

"As you know, Gypsy, I never went to school a day in my life and everything I learned I learned the hard way. I also learned never to forget anything I learned, which is something most people never learn.

"But to get back to the women. When I first started in pictures I was in a movie with Claudette Colbert. She was the star and I had a bit part. But she was always very nice to me, and one time after a day's shooting she called me into her dressing room for a cup of tea. We chatted about the movie we were making and then Claudette suddenly got quite serious.

"Tune,' she said, 'I've been watching you on the set out there and I think you're the kind of woman who can do it. I think you can make a success of pictures. Too bad you're not prettier.' Claudette put her hand on my shoulder to cushion that crack, but I liked it because it seemed to me to prove she wasn't lying.

"The trouble with you,' Claudette went on, 'is that you use too much of your talent. You overplay everything. Too much frosting can spoil a cake. Go home now and read your lines in front of a mirror, just as you've done today. Then read them again, with I per cent of strength. I don't know you very well, but I'm willing to bet that that formula, I per cent of strength, could be applied to everything about you—not just your acting.'

"Well, Claudette was right. I was too vivid, my whispers were whispered too low and my shouts were shouted too loud. But no man could have perceived that.

How Do You Say '5'?

"Then take Lucille Ball. We were working together and one day Lucille said, 'Kid, one of the troubles with you are your "s's".' She pointed out that every time I uttered the letter 's' my lip would sort of curl up, giving me a sinister expression. I said, I knew that—but what could I do?

"'You never look at yourself correctly,' Lucille said. 'If you're going to succeed you must be able to be almost two persons, the person you are and a kind of disembodied June Havoe who can inspect the real June and give her advice. When you go home tonight, plaster some adhesive tape on your mouth and then practice your "s".'

"Well, by golly, I went home and put on the adhesive tape. I kept it on every moment I wasn't in front of the cameras for about two weeks. After that I never had any trouble with an 's'. But a man would never have advised me to do just that. He would have thought a woman might be silly and vain about wearing the adhesive. Lucille knew.

"And take Gertrude Lawrence. When I first knew her I had a complex about not having an education. I mentioned this rather shyly one time and she burst into howls of laughter.

"'June,' she said, 'always remember that from birth any woman has more education than any man. You don't have to worry about competing in terms of education with men. You're already ahead of them. What you lack right now is what I call "woman confidence."

"'Lots of women lack confidence in being women. They feel they are surrounded and trapped by what they hear men call "a man's world." If a man wants to think of our world as a man's world, let him, the poor darling. It doesn't do any great harm. Just develop your woman confidence and you'll be all right.'

"Gertrude, of course, was right. But what man could have said what she said or thought that way? A man simply couldn't comprehend what Gertrude was telling me."

Gypsy put her comb down. "What you say," she said, "is all perfectly true and I am glad you've said it and I hope April understands it." She grinned at me. "Of course, all of this might be construed as an attack on men."

"An attack on men?" I said, in astonishment. "Who said anything against men?"

Your Son Can Save Baseball

A top weapon against juvenile delinquency, a school for sportsmanship, boys' leagues also may rescue our national pastime from a slow death

by CARL LUNDQUIST

This week marks the first "Let's Play Basehall Week," a dream of Commissioner Ford C. Frick to revive flagging interest in the game. For organized baseball is in trouble; harried by TV, waning crowds and the slow death of the minor leagues, it must scramble to keep its place as the national pastime.

But only the professional game is suffering. At a certain age level, baseball is more vigorous than ever. More than 3,000,000 youngsters, from the age of 8 up, will frolic around ball parks this year. With their passionate love for the game, they are keeping it alive as a participant sport while it withers as a spectator sport.

Not only are these youngsters playing baseball; they're learning it as it should be played -on standardized diamonds, with up-to-date equipment and proper instruction. The old choose-up games have not died out-many boys, after an "official" game, still finish up playing catch in the back yard-but now, for the first time, there is an organized baseball program aimed at your boy.

All he has to furnish is his glove; bats, balls, uniforms, protective equipment and playing space are provided. He is under the supervision of competent instructors, insured against accident, trained in the code of decency and fair play. On each level from knee-high to adult an organization of adults is working to extend its baseball program and the lessons it teaches.

The program starts out with the Little Leagues, best known of the juvenile baseball groups. From a start with three teams in Williamsport, Pa., in 1939, Little League baseball has grown until, at the end of 1954, 500,000 boys were enrolled-not only in the U.S. but also in Canada, Alaska, Puerto Rico, Panama and Korea.

in a Little League, your son is eligible for a baseball career at age 8. He plays on a cutdown diamond (roughly two-thirds standard size) and games last only six innings.

Your son starts with a Little League "farm club," where he learns the rules and fundamentals of the game under adult coaching. He may proceed from there to a regular league team, then move into the elimination tournaments that wind up with the annual Little League World Series, held each August in Williamsport.

He graduates from the Little Leagues at 12. For many years, that was the end of his career. There was no organized program for 13-year-olds and up. Now he has a choice of two.

Formed in 1952, in Trenton, N. J., the Babe Ruth Leagues for boys 13 to 15 have enjoyed phenomenal growth. In their first year there were 67 leagues. The following year the number tripled to 223; last year there were 449; and this season Director C. Vincent Williams expects close to 900, involving 50,000 boys.

Also for 13- and 14-year-olds is the P-O-N-Y (Protect Our Nation's Youth) League, directed by Commissioner Lewis W. Hays of Washington, Pa. P-O-N-Y has 2,210 teams in 463 leagues. It covers 35 states and five Canadian provinces, and, like the Little Leagues and Babe Ruth Leagues, has a playoff tournament leading up to a World Series.

The program continues even after your boy has passed the age for Babe Ruth ball. There is high-school baseball, directed by the National Federation of High School Athletic Associations. And, if his high school has no baseball team, there are three other organizations bidding for him.

The best-known of these is American Legion Baseball, now directed by Lou Brissie, who had a brief major league career with the Philadelphia Athletics and Cleveland Indians despite a leg that had been shattered by shrapnel. American Legion posts in every state sponsor teen-age teams under Brissie's guidance. More than 250,000 boys of 16 and over participate in Legion leagues.

Also in the field is the American Baseball Congress of Battle Creek, Mich. The ABC does not limit itself to work with teenagers; its domain includes sandlot ball for adults in industrial leagues and civic and park recreational groups, as well as baseball programs for rural youngsters. In 1954, according to Director C. O. Brown, 1,609 teams in 39 states played under ABC guidance.

The NRA Program

The third organization with baseball programs for this age group is the National Recreation Association. Its college-trained supervisors direct games in public parks and athletic fields. The group provides managers and coaches to be sure that the boys learn the game under the highest standards of sportsmanship.

Finally your boy may get into the college baseball program, administered by Everett D. Barnes of Colgate University, representing the American Association of College Baseball Coaches. One of this group's major headaches has been to keep professional baseball scouts from luring college ballplayers away before they have graduated.

Except for the Little Leagues, all these groups are coordinated by the National Committee for Amateur Baseball, directed by the Babe Ruth Leagues' Williams.

Of what value is this extensive course in baseball? Like other recreational programs, it has the blessing of juvenile-delinquency experts, who believe that athletics tend to keep youngsters busy and out of trouble. "We don't pretend that just because a kid plays baseball he is immune from getting into mischief or even serious trouble," says Williams. "But we do believe that if much of his time is taken up with the wholesome diversion that baseball provides, there won't be those hours when a boy may do something wrong because there wasn't anything right that looked interesting."

An amen comes from Mayor Jesse A. Collyer, Jr. of Ossining, N. Y., who also is supervisor of vocational activities at Sing Sing prison. "We get boys when it is too late for Little League or Babe Ruth baseball to help." he says. "Then it's our job to try to make good men out of bad boys. Because I work with boys on both sides of prison walls, I know what programs such as these can do to help cut down juvenile delinquency.

"I don't think many parents realize that it costs them as taxpayers $1,500 a year for every boy who is sent to Sing Sing. So kid baseball is an investment and we can't spend too much money and energy on it."

Today your son can be a ballplayer practically from the cradle. Perhaps his years in the junior game will make a major leaguer out of him. Even if they don't he will graduate into the adult world with many valuable lessons learned; the ideals of democracy, of decency, of sportsmanship will have become second nature to him. He will have had a safety valve for those years when boyish energy might have led him astray.

Perhaps he will reach the major leagues in time to help save them from a slow, agonizing death. In any case, your son, and millions of boys like him, are in a position to maintain and strengthen the Great American Gameand have a wonderful time doing it.

HOME-MADE plans, with rooms outlined in tape, are studied by hard-working builder Nels Christensen and wife, Muriel.

The story of a modern pioneer family:

'We built our own DREAM HOUSE'

by SID ROSS

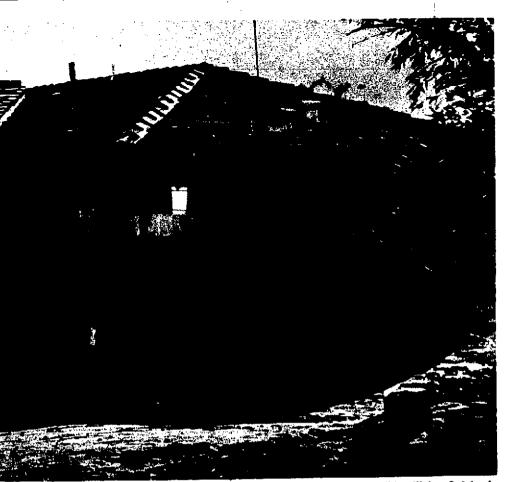

CHIMNEY SWEEP' Lonnie is lowered by father's arms into chimney to kick loose excess martar which had blocked the flue.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF. Out of the meadows 20 miles east of here, on a knoll sprinkled with offive trees, rises a half-completed adobe ranch house. It looks like the home of a wealthy man; indeed, even in its present state it recently drew an offer of $30,000, Sprawling as it does on its five-acre hilltop site, it seems a massive construction project. Yet the work crew numbers only four.

These are the four: retired sailor Nels T. Christensen, 45, who is planner, architect, mason, carpenter, plumber; Ted (Nels T. Jr.), 10, electrician's helper, plumber's helper, hod carrier; Arlon Keith, 8, chimney sweep and laborer, and Mrs. Muriel Christensen, 32, forbidden by faniily ruling from building work, but assigned to keeping the building-and the family -going.

These are the Christensens, and this is their house-theirs because they have built all of it, adobe brick by adobe brick, with their own hands, Measured in terms of time and money, it has cost them $8,000 in materials and nearly three years of labor; and another year still lies ahead. It has meant scrimping and saving and cutting corners. But the Christensens' story of a dream come true is not one of labor and money, but of courage, determination and family solidarity and spirit.

"I've always admired the pioneers," says Muriel Christensen, "I feel that we've been doing the same kind of thing. I think if more people did this, they'd not only have better homes but more feeling of pride and accomplishment. The house is part of us; it's something we live with and love. And it's brought us closer together than we've ever been before."

The Christensens' story actually begins July 3, 1943, the day Nels Christensen, a sailor since he was 17, came back from Guadalcanal. He had been shot up, he'd had eight attacks of malaria, he suffered from a bad heart; doctors told him frankly he had been sent home to die. As he walked down Market Street in San Francisco, he leaned against a car bumper. The car owner blew the horn. The owner was Muriel's father, and Muriel was sitting inside. That was their first meeting.

Assigned to a Navy hospital in Oakland, Nels daily crossed the bay to San Francisco. A month later they were married. The adobe house was part of their dreams from the first. They would sit and talk about a house in the country, on a hilltop, with horses, perhaps, and plenty of land.

Until 1947, when he retired, Nels was assigned to a limited-duty Navy outfit on the West Coast. The "hilltop house" remained a dream. After his discharge, the Christensens bought an old house in La Mesa, a San Diego suburb, and spent three months remodeling it. Occasionally, they would look for a setting for their dream hame

In July, 1952, they found it-10 acres near El Cajon. To make the dream come true, with no real savings, meant some drastic steps. The first order of business was a family conference.

"We explained to the kids that we wanted something no one could take away from us," Muriel says. "We told them they could have horses and plenty of outdoors. But we said they'd have to help with the building, and they'd have to help clean the house because I had to go to work while Daddy spent all his time working on the house. They were enthused right from the start, and they've coopcrated all the way."

They swapped their La Mesa house for a few days in the hot sun showed them they couldn't do the clearing themselves. So they had to dip into their nest egg-$85-and hire a bulldozer for $60 to do the clearing. That was the only bit of professional help during the whole construction project.

The Christensen house is more than a home. It's part of the family—and it's a family education, too

With their own home-made plans ("Why spend $35 for blueprints?") penciled on a sheet of paper, the Christensens then set to work. Each morning the boys would bounce out of bed, straighten up the house and, often, cook breakfast while their-mother set out for work. Their father drove them to school, then went to the hilltop and put in a nine-hour day. He spent his evenings in his workshop, making accessories or preparing for the next

After school and on week ends, the boys pitched in. They carried heavy stones to fill in the foundation forms ("The more rocks you use, the stronger the foundation"), and when the adobe work began they lugged 30- and 50-pound adobe bricks. Ted was given the job of mixing the special cement used between the bricks, and Lonnie carried shingles. Both boys helped to lay water pipes and electric lines and to set up the septic system.

The Family Moves In

But it wasn't forced work, "Whenever I felt they'd had enough, or when they wanted to play, they could take off," Christensen says. "They're only boys once, and we want them to have fun, too."

Building with adobe is hot, dusty, wearying work, but gradually the house began to take shape. Last April, nearly two years after they started, the Christensens were able to move in. Only the west wing was complete. Its dining room became an "acting bedroom," as the Christensens call it, and so did the den. The kitchen was complete, down to garbagedisposal unit and dishwasher, and so was the bath. It was cramped, but it was theirs.

Next target was the living room-"the crossbar of the H," as Nels explains the house's layout. All summer and fall, he and his young helpers laid adobe brick and shingled the roof. Using bricks from a 100-year-old house nearby that had burned, he built a huge fireplace in one end of the 17-by-24 room.

Christmas was coming, and Christensen was determined they would have their tree and celebration in the living room. That meant working nearly 24 hours a day to lay the quarry-tile floor. Helped by the boys and a sailor friend, he finished on Christmas Eve, and brought in the tree; then the whole family settled down to a double celebration. "I just couldn't believe we had gone so far," says Mrs. Christenknacks are from Nels' travel with Navy. Bookshelves and cabinels at right (including hinges) are products of his home workshop.

sen. Her parents came down from Los Angeles, and friends dropped in. They sat around the new living room and drank eggnog and talked—mostly about how long it would take to finish the house.

Christensen's guess is one more year. He already is hard at work on the east wing, and when that is complete the "acting bedroom" will revert to a dining room and the family will sleep in the new two-hedroom, 1½-bath wing. By that time, he figures, the family will have invested nearly $10,000 in the house.

Money has been a problem to the Christensens ever since hiring the bulldozer knocked their grubstake down to $25. Muriel's income never has come to much more than $35 a week. Nels draws a Navy pension of $120 a month, and this money has been a big help. Once, when they were pressed, they had to sell five acres of their treasured land for $8,000. Sometimes, Mrs. Christensen picks up an odd job (recently, for instance, she spent a week end hand-addressing 4,500 envelopes for $80) and occasionally her husband takes a car-repair job. But currently their bank account is down to $700, in spite of careful economies.

before meals as directed, this delicious

LAST WORD in kitchen equipment has been built into Christensen house. Above, Muriel uses automatic dishwosher. Kitchen also has washer, dryer, garbage disposal.

In spite of their money problems, the Christensens have refused to compromise on any of their dreams. Mrs. Christensen wanted a fully equipped modern kitchen; she has it now, complete with every laborsaving gadget imaginable. Each of the two half-baths has a shower stall; the full bath will have a square, green, sunken bathtub

--another of Muriel's dreams. The rooms are built to fit the family's specifications and there has been no cutting of corners.

One money-saving system has been Christensen's knack of building almost anything himself. The kitchen cabinets, the built-in storage space in the living room are all his handiwork. Even the door hinges are the product of a small home forge in the workshop. "I think my husband is just a genius," says his wife.

The boys are as proud of the place as are their parents. When they bring friends home from school, they take them through the whole house, pointing out bricks they helped to carry or wiring they did. "It's been real hard work," says Ted, "but it's been fun. I'd rather play a little more, work on my short-wave crystal set or something, but I want a house, too, just like Mummy and Daddy do, so I know that means I have to work."

Eight-year-old Lonnie adds, "I wouldn't want to work all the time, but I like to learn how to do things. None of the other kids know how to build a house."

The Christensens are proud of their dream house, but they're even more proud of what it's done for their boys. "We've been drawn closer together in building our home than we ever could have been if we'd bought one," Mrs. Christensen says. "And we are building something here that no contractor could ever give us—two self-sufficient young men who know the rewards of honest labor, and a home with roots as well as a foundation."

'The old order changes'-but not for

Formal Invitations

Social rules have been greatly relaxed and many have been changed to make things easier for us in the past decade or so. The etiquette of formal invitations and responses to them, however, remains fairly rigid. Here are some recent questions on the subject from PARADE readers.

O. What do the initials "R,S,V,P," stand for? My uncle says the phrase means to respond to the invitation by attending. I think it means "Respond if you please," meaning to respond by telling the sender of the invitation whether or not you are attending.—M.S., St. Albans, N. Y.

A. You are right. The initials stand for the French phrase which means "Respond if you please"—and, socially, means "Answer one way or the other." Occasionally on formal invitations you see the English phrase, "The favour (note spelling of 'favour'—the English style is always used in 'favour,' 'honour,' etc., in formal invitations) of a reply is requested."

Q. I am having a very small, informal wedding with a small home reception. Is it proper to send engraved invitations to the wedding or should I just send announcements, engraved, afterward?—B.A.T., Edgewater Park, N. J.

A. It is usual for such a small, informal wedding to invite the guests by word of mouth, by notes or by telephone. However, engraved announcements may go out to a very wide list of friends if you choose.

Q. My mother has been married twice and I have been making my home with my mother and my stepfather. How should my wedding invitations be worded?—A.C.C., New York, N. Y.

A. They should read:

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith request the honour of your presence at the marriage of her daughter Anne Brown

The line may also read, "at the marriage of Mrs. Smith's daughter."

Q. My brother-in-law is to be married very soon. He was our best man not very long ago. However, he didn't ask my husband to be his best man and we are very hurt. Shouldn't he have done so?—8.C., Elmwood Park, 1H.

A. Not necessarily. Your best man has the right to choose anyone he wishes to be his best man.

Q. When a noncommissioned officer marries, how does his name appear on a formal wedding invitation?—M.R.R., St. Louis, Me.

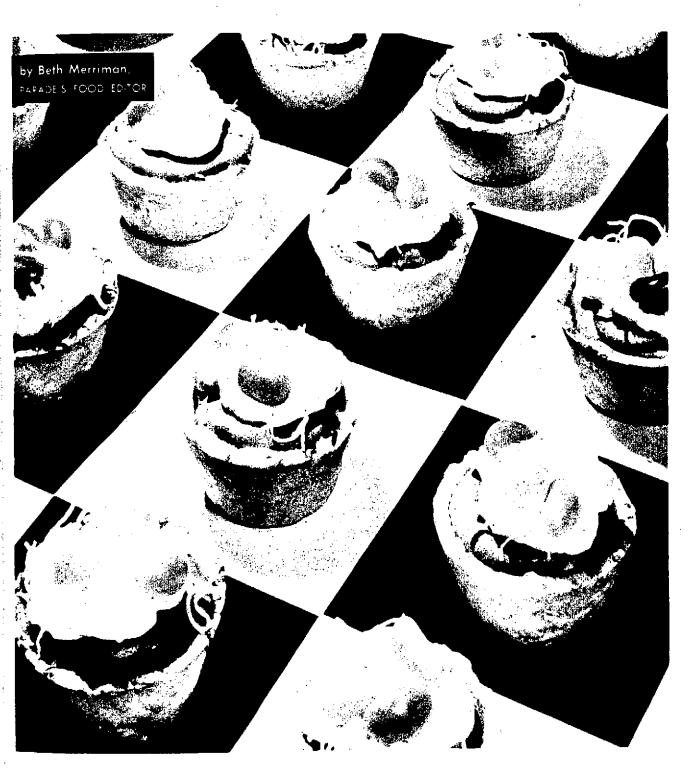

A. This is optional. Usually noncommissioned officers and enlisted men prefer to use only their names, with the branch of service immediately below:

Wilson Ford (Note, not "Mr.")
United States Marine Corps
However, a staff sergeant would be listed in this way:

Wilson Ford
Staff Sergeant United States Marine
Corpse(no comma)

MOCHA COCONUT TARTS

There's coconut mixed right into the rich shortbread-pastry that makes these tarts so unusual. Once the fluffy mocha filling is added and the tarts are crowned with a swirl of cream, you have a dessert to tempt the Knave of Hearts to repeat his thievery! They're just the thing to serve after a fourtable card party-and easy to make, besides.

MOCHA COCONUT TARTS

Coconut Shortbroad Tarl Shells:

2 cups sifted flour 1/1 cup butter or margarine 2 cups coconut, finely A tablesagons sugar 2 eggs, separated Cream butter ar margarine; add sugar gradually, while creaming. Beat in egg yolks. (Save whites for filling.) Stir in flour and cocanut; mix until well blanded. Divide mixture among 16 2%-inch mulfin pans, pressing mixture with fingers to line bottom and sides of each pan. Prick with tines of fork, Bake in a maderate oven (350°F.) 20 to 25 minutes. Coal

3 minutes; remove from pan. Makes 16 tarts.

Mocha filling

1 envelope unflavored gelatine

I teaspoon instant coffee 3/3 cup sugar, divided

1/4 teaspoon salt

1/4 cup evaporated milk 3 egg whites

1 teaspoon vanilla

% cup water

l egg yolk, slightly

Mix together gelatine, coffee, 1/3 cup of the sugar and salt in saucepan. Add evaporated milk, water and chocolate. Stir over medium heat, until chocolate is melted and gelatine is dissolved. (Do not boit.) Blend with rotary beater. Pour slowly over beaten egg yalk, stirring constantly. Return to saucepan; cook I minute longer, stirring constantly. Remove from heat; stir in vanilla. Chiff until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon.

Beat egg whites until stiff, but not dry. Gradually add remaining 1/3 cup sugar; beat until very stiff. Fold in chocolate mixture. Spoon into propared tart shells. Gainish each tart with whipped cream and additional coconut; for an Easter touch, put two or three jelly beans on top. Makes 16 servings.

Magnet is carefully put in place before use. Patient is under local anesthetic.

Eye-Saver-Giant Size

Mighty magnet draws out metal fragments buried deep in the eye as a result of industrial, home accidents

CHICAGO

The gadget above is powerful enough to snap a set of keys right out of your hand at four feet. But doctors have a more important use for it—removal of the deeply embedded (and luckily very rare) specks of metal and dirt that get in your eyes and cannot be removed in any other way without risk of permanent damage. At Michael Reese Hospital here, doctors call on their "giant eye magnet" (about two dozen U. S. hospitals have them) when all other measures fail.

The big drum in the photo contains an electromagnet. The slim barrel, pointing toward the eye, is the "probe tip." When a piece of metal, for instance, is lodged deep in the patient's eye, he is put under local anesthesia. A surgeon makes an incision along the exact pathway by which the fragment entered. Then the probe tip is placed against the eye and the magnet turned on.

The fragment comes out the way it went in. Result: no further damage to the eye and no impairment of vision.

Is The Catholic Church Out of Place in America?

Some critics say "yes" and give as their reasons that the Church is not 100 per cent American and not democratic.

They say it is undemocratic, for example, for the Church to oppose birth control and divorce with remarriage. It is undemocratic for Catholics to maintain their own schools... to campaign against obscene literature, books and films... to promulgate a distinctive Catholic culture.

What, we ask, could be more undemocratic than to deny Catholics the right to do these very things if they choose?

Christ's Church was not intended, of course, to be American, or British, French or German. It was to be catholic, not national—at home everywhere, alien nowhere. Nor was Christ's Church designed to be democratic. It was established on a hierarchical system, with authority vested in the Apostles—nos in the Congregation. That is the nature and design of the Catholic Church.

To assert that the Catholic Church is undemocratic implies that it is anti-democratic and antagonistic to America's "democratic" system. Nothing could be further from the truth. No firmer dedication to democratic principles could be made than that voiced by the Catholic Bishops of the United States at their Third Plenary Council, in Baltimore, in 1884. The present Pope, Pius XII, supplementing similar comments by earlier Popes, declared in 1944 that the member of a true democracy is "a citizen of honor, of personal activity and of dignity."

In 1576—just 200 years before the Declaration of Independence— Robert Cardinal Bellarmine, a famed member of the Catholic Hierarchy—wrote that "all men are equal"..."that political right is from God"..."that man must be governed by someone"... that government "must depend on the consent of the multitude"... and that "for legitimate ressons the people can change the government."

If America is to have a genuine democracy, it must be recognized as the right of the Catholic Hierarchy to expound Catholic doctrine, to instruct the Catholic people, to legislate and regulate in matters concerning the Catholic Church. To do so infringes in no way on the rights or liberties of non-Catholics.

If you would like to have a better understanding of the Catholic Church and its attitudes and activities, write today for our free pamphlet. It will be sent in a plain wrapper... nobody will call on you. Fill in coupon—mail today! Ask for Pamphlet No. PR-49.

A little Spanish boy has an experience

This is Salvador Dali at work in the garden of his home, with all six arms busy. Says he: "Out of collapse and destruction

I will create objects of incomprehensible glory."

APPROACHING Dali's home, Juan Figueras finds a caged abacus and an ornate clock right in the middle of the road.

that leaves him a bit confused

A DAY WITH

CADAQUES, SPAIN. A visit to the home of artist Salvador Dali near here, callers report, is much like a pleasant nightmare. A recent visitor was little Juan Figueras, son of a fisherman who lives in this sleepy Spanish village. By sheer coincidence, a photographer happened to be present when the boy trudged up the road to the publicity-conscious artist's villa. The photos on these pages are the result.

Juan found Dali curled up under a table reading The Secret Life of Salvador Dali upside down and backwards.

"I am very busy," the painter greeted him, "being Dali. Who are you and how can I insult you?"

Said Juan: "I am from a family of catchers. Father catches fish and the lizard on our porch catches flies."

"Ah, flies!" cried Dali. "Flies are a symbol of mobility, life and the unexpected. Flies are the symbol of Dali. 1 must paint Gala!" And he rushed into the garden where his wife, Gala, was waiting for this moment. "I think I shall paint her with two raw chops."

Later, Juan was invited to join in a meal of sea urchins. He pointed out that sea urchins were out of season. "You," Dali scolded, "are unfantastic!"

He went on to describe his next movie, in which, he said, Anna Magnani will push a wheelbarrow with handles like legs. Her helper? Juan Figueras, of course.

After that, Juan went home. It had been a long, full, confusing day.

At dinner Dali says: "Sea urchins are good for inducing systematic delirium."

DAT McCORMICK, Long Beach's daredevil darling of the diving boards, an Olympic champion in two events and holder of more records than the National Archives, is looking forward to the day when she can exchange a diving board for an ironing board and her 101 medals for diaper pins.

At the "ripe old age" of 24, the nation's No. 1 aqua star is readying for one more try at the Olympics in 1956 and then plans to call it quits, insofar as active competition is concerned, to "raise a family."

Pat's designs on an early retirement are easily understandable, looking back over the past six years of her life.

Since Pat won the first of her 19 national diving titles in 1949, she has been a busy girl, indeed.

At last count, she had collected more than 200 awards, including well over 100 medals, 21 trophies and 16 shields, plus enough placques and ribbons to fill several trophy cases.

She was named the nation's "woman of the year in sports" in 1953, is in the Helms' Hall of Fame, and is known the world over for her unassuming manner and her magnificent athletic achievements.

Including trips to 12 foreign countries and almost every state in the Union, Pat has traveled well over 50,000 miles during the past six years, giving exhibi-tions and representing the United States and the Los Angeles Athletic Club in competition.

But even when she is not traveling, Pat's schedule would be enough to harry an average girl. A typical day includes three to five hours of study and four hours of classes at Long Beach City College, three hours of practice at the LAAC pool, in addition to the usual chores of house-

It's little wonder, then, that Pat is eagerly awaiting the day

GLENN AND PAT, who met in 1948 and were married in 1949, recently purchased a house in Lakewood, but have had little time to enjoy their home since Glenn, too, is a busy man. The former SC gymnastics star is pursuing graduate work at SC now in addition to his chores as swimming coach at the LAAC.

Both Pat and Glenn agree that five children would be just about right, but right now their "family" consists of Pat's companion and chief competition in many meets — Gail Benton and Aleutian Brave, a ninemonth-old Chesapeake retriever.

Gail and Brave are both under the tutelage of the McCormicks. Pat met Gail in 1951 during the tryouts for the Pan-American Games team in Gail's hometown of Atlanta, Ga. During her stay in Atlanta, Pat lived with Gail and her family. When Gail received an invitation to compete in Hawaii last summer, she found that she needed coaching on platform diving.

By Jack Teele

At Pat's suggestion she came to California last June and is currently studying under Glenn's tutelage at the LAAC pool. Although she might conceivably be making competition tough for her insofar as future meets are concernet, Pat has helped Glenn coach Gail with the same verve and vitality which characterize her own training.

Brave, not unlike his family, is a talented fellow. Pat and Glenn have trained him to obey commands, run errands and behave in a manner far in excess of that expected of a fellow his Training of Brave, skiing, sunning on the beach - all favorite hobbies with the McCormicks have suffered because of their heavy schedule. These things, plus the family and home, will get more attention when finis is written to the 1956 Olympics.

RIGHT NOW, however, it's more of the same globetrotting for Pat.

She was recently in New Zealand with swimmer Shelley Mann on an exhibition tour. She returned to Long Beach for two days March 5 before taking off again for the Pan-American Games in Mexico City.

Next, Pat will head for Daytona Beach, Fla., to defend her two National Indoor titles slated for April 7-9. When she returns to Long Beach, Pat will take a short rest until May and then begin work in earnest for the outdoor nationals set for Philadelphia in August, and the Olympic Games in Australia.

Hours of study and attendance at City College classes are in addition to Pat's rigorous round of training.

Here Pat pours for husband, Glenn (Mick) McCormick, who's also busy as a swim coach and SC graduate student, and Gail Borden. Pat's diving protege.

Housewifely chores must also be attended to. Pat is no stranger to a vacuum cleaner or other home appliances.

So Your Youngster's ASTHMATIC!

By Stella George

(Author's Note: This article is not written from a medical standpoint. It is written with a view to helping young mothers who are filled with apprehension when the doctor says the words, "Your child is asthmatic.")

THE TELEPHONE rang just as young Mrs. Sloan tucked the covers in well around her aleeping 4-year-old daughter, Pam.

"Hello?"

"Hi, Mabel; this is Jean. How's Pam?"

"She's sleeping at last. And, Jean, the doctor says it's asthma. Isn't that awful. I don't know what we'll do."

"Oh, that's terrible, Mabel . . . just terrible. Do you know that the child of a friend of my sister's got it and they had the worst time with her. Just tried everything, but couldn't cure it. I've heard . . . "

"Jean, I'll call you back. Pam's crying again and I have to go in to her. Bye."

MRS. SLOAN went to her small daughter. Pam was breathing heavily, whimpering a little and trying to suck her thumb. As Mrs. Sloan held the child, a montage of phrases and words about asthma that she had heard from time to time flitted through her mind.

"She'll never outgrow it."

"They almost die gasping for breath."

"You'll have to move to a dry, warm climate."

"There's no cure."

"They can't play like normal children."

"They have to stay in bed for weeks at a time."

"It always turns into pneu monia."

"It weakens them so that they never reach their real growth."

Asthma — the word was fearful to Mrs. Sloan. . . .

ASTHMA is, in deed, a nuisance. It's a bother and a worry, and it must be taken care of. A child in the throes of an asthmatic attack can gasp for breath in such a manner as to frighten even the initiated. However, a young mother can nurse an asthmatic youngster in such a way that it does not become the frightening, fear-provoking disease Mrs. Sloan anticipated.

The dictionary defines asthma "A disease characterized by difficulty in breathing, accompanied with a wheezing sound, a sense of constriction in the chest, a cough, and expectoration." Most doctors agree that rest, rest and more rest is prescription No. 1 for the asthmatic child. Since every phase of asthma is so highly debatable, the causes and cures so controversial, no common denominator can really be established. It does stand to reason that rest is logically imperative in a situation where actual breathing is somewhat difficult.

Rest, then, means a stay in bed or reasonable facsimile thereof. And therein lies a problem for a young mother — if a child who is not sick in the sense that he has chickenpox or mumps, 'still has to rest in an invalid manner.

FIRST, it is important that the mother show no great anxiety or concern when her child wheezes for every breath. (She has already taken the necessary step of consulting the doctor and procuring necessary prescription medication; the recuperation period is now in her hands.) Anxiety and fear are contagious, and these, added to asthmatic symptoms, can further physical strain on the child. Therefore, a smart mother is cheerful and happy as she plays nurse to her patient.

Assuming that rest-in-bed is the order for the day - or four or five days — for the little asthma patient, mother has the problem of what to do with him for, perhaps, a 100-hour period. During the daytime, a bed in the living room can alleviate many problems of entertainment. A bed can be created either on the couch or on a chair-andhassock combination. A clean, folded sheet can serve as the mattress cover, and two pillows form a back rest. An inexpensive bed tray is an excellent investment. (It can always serve as a television dinner-tray when in medical use.) A light blanket covering makes the bedin-living room complete. Now the setting and background are Assuming that five days rest is what the doctor ordered, the young mother thinks. "Five days in BED! What shall I do to entertain Junior?" Well, it does take patience, a little imagination, and a little more patience. but it can be done without too much effort. Meals are the high light of any invalid's day. Therefore, prepare six small instead of three large meals per day. Serve these meals, if possible, coincident with top daytime children's television shows. Two extra minutes of preparation are all it takes to serve these meals attractively and with a little fanciful creation in mind. A marshmallow floating on top of warm milk . . . hot cereal tinted pink with food coloring . . . a cherry on top of custard . . . all make the meals a little extra special.

NOW THE BETWEEN-MEAL and between-television entertainment presents a problem. What may seem like catering, actually can make mother's day a little ensier. Give the patient one toy at a time to play with and set the kitchen clock timer to ring when the time is up for that game. This little bit of psychology makes playing the game more interesting because the element of time limit is there, and junior is eager to utilize every moment before time is up. (This technique has definitely been tested and proved!) When the bell rings after, say, 20 minutes, it's time to whisk No. 1 game away and, with a flourish, bring out game No. 2.

"What games can he play that I don't have to sit down and play with him?" mothers query. Here are some suggestions: Flannel Fun, the delightful game which consists of making felt figures on a flannel board (this particular game appeals to youngsters of almost any age), is a perfect The process of cutin-bed toy. ting out plates, knives, forks and spoons from old magazines and pasting them on plain paper, thus setting a paper table, is a wonderful time filler-inner. A 10cent package of envelopes plus a few sheets of paper cut into small squares provides material for make-believe letter writing. When drawing paper and pencil are given, show the child how to use a sheet of carbon paper. The act of making two drawings instead of one makes this simple entertainment a special treat. (Yes, he'll get carbon on his hands, but they are washable!)

THE SMALL PATIENT can even play dress-up. Little girls can make thin cardboard crowns and decorate them with loose sequins (cost: 10 cents a package) pasted on, and crown themselves Queen for the Day. Crowns might then be made for doll princesses.

A smart mother can make up a schedule for herself and her patient if a five-day rest is anticipated. Thus, if the timer rings and it's Flannel Fun time, mother can say, "Now it's my ironing time." A youngster who realizes that his (and his mother's) day is systematically planned will make far fewer demands than one who knows from the start that his mother is upset and disturbed. A serene mother of an asthmatic child will, in all probability, provide one of the best cures of all Asthma has forced Vicki, 6, daughter of the author of accompanying article, to spend 250 days of life in bed. Meals served before TV help ease boredom.

Various games, changed on a regular schedule, help make bedfast hours pass interestingly for Vicki when as them a attacks force her to take long rests.

Studious looking men sit silently at desks, poring over books — big text books, not twobit sex novels.

The guns on their hips look out of place.

Downstairs, it's the same story with the men on the uniform desk. Between answering telephone calls, the policemen get out their homework for tomorrow's classes in police science at Long Beach State College or Harbor Junior College in Wilmington. Increased emphasis on the theory of criminal detection and the legal aspects of police work have made it necessary for ambitious officers to spend more and more time studying. To fill the need of guided study in this field, colleges over the country have initiated police science curriculums.

LONG BEACH STATE COL-LEGE started police courses last fall. The institution now offers 18 semester hours in the field. Harbor JC has been offering police science courses for more than five years.

The classes were set up at both schools by Donald A. Jones, formerly a sergeant in the Los Angeles Police Department attached to Harbor Division and now a practicing attorney in Long Beach. With his background in police work and his legal training, Jones is an ideal instructor in the field.

"I try to teach them the things that will help them get ahead," Jones says of his classes.

JUST HOW SUCCESSFUL he has been was shown by the results of the last police sergeant's test in Long Beach. Of the top 15 men in the exam, most of whom can expect to be made three-stripers in the future, 13 came from Jones' classes.

One of the last photos ever taken of Jack London's famous old ketch, the Snark as it lay in the backwater of West Basin; now buried in port fill.

Cemetery of Lost Ships

By Douglas Nelson Rhodes

Los Angeles Harbor is a graveyard of old ships that rivals the legendary Sargasso Sea. Stranger still, this odd cemetery of the sea, which is the resting place of old windjammers, once-famous luxurious yachts and smaller craft, lies not in watery depths but underground!

In the time-squeezing frenzy of the war years when the federal government sent huge dredges and other equipment to fill in a portion of the harbor known as West Basin in order to expand the facilities of Todd Shipyard, few persons, perhaps, noted the significance of the event. Only the old salts realized that they were witnessing the closing of another chapter in the endless story of the seaunder a cover of tons of mud and sand. For it was in West Basin that the dredges labored relentlessly to bury from sight the mouldering bones of the old ships and transform the basin from an unsightly, generationlong "catchall" of junked marine gear into a useful piece of real estate whereon new ships came into being literally upon the worn-out hulks of their ances-

Local residents will recall the stagnant area as a smelly, depressing backwater place which was seldom visited by tourists or Sunday afternoon yachtsmen; a dead and decaying world of refuse shunned by all who might seek beauty or inspiration in the pulsing activity of the waterfront.

Yet, in the greenish muck that was the inlet of West Basin there lay — and still lies, though now deep underground — the key to fascinating secrets of high adventure that once took place on the decks of the blackened and barnacled skeletons wallowing there.

PROBABLY THE MOST FA-MOUS of these derelicts, now hidden in mud, is Jack London's old ketch, the Snark, on which he m de many voyages and which was the subject of one of his best-loved tales, "The Cruise of the Snark."

The Snark's condition was the worst of the lot. Her gaunt ribs lay in shallow, murky water, covered with slime and barnacles. Her masts and deck had rotted away, her seams gaped and the last vestiges of paint had disappeared. She gave the impression of having lain in this miniature Sargasso Sea for centuries, though records show that she was used as a smuggler and rum runner as late as 1930.

Few craft have had as adventurous a career as the Snark. London sailed her through the Golden Gate for the first time on April 23, 1907, on a long voyage to Hawaii and the South Seas. She weathered all manner of storms and hurricanes in every part of the Pacific with the intrepid sailor-author at the helm. The novelist sold her in Australia and she was used for a period as a slave ship in the New Hebrides. Still later she turned up in the Bering Sea in the sealing trade and eventually fourd her way to Seattle under the "alias" of Saucy Lass.

The London family lost track of her just prior to World War I, when her name again was changed. It was during these years that the Snark saw duty as a smuggler and later played an exciting role in the illegal figure trade, dodging prohibition agents all along the California coast. Gradually the 43-foot vessel deteriorated from neglect and finally was abandoned with other tired sea veterans that now sleep under the Todd Shipyard property.

BUT THE SNARK has plenty of illustrious company in her graveyard. Several other onetime rum rum ers, their hulls still bearing machine-gun bullet (Continued on Page 8.)

Listerine Antiseptic Stops Bad Breath 4 Times Better Than Tooth Paste!

Germs—The Major Cause of Mouth Odor

Far and away the most common cause of bad breath is fermentation of proteins which are always present in the mouth. This fermentation is caused by germs and research shows that your breath stays sweeter longer, the more you reduce germs in the mouth.

Listorine Autiseptic Kills Germs by Millions

Listerine Antiseptic kills germs by millions on contact. Test after test has shown that even fifteen minutes after gargling with Listerine Antiseptic, germs on tooth, mouth, and throat surfaces were reduced up to 96.7%; one hour afterward, as much as 80%.

No Tooth Paste Kills Germs Like This

Tooth paste with the aid of a tooth brush is an effective method of oral hygiene. It depends largely on the mechanical and masking methods of removing unpleasant mouth odors. But no tooth paste gives you the proven Listerine Antiseptic method—banishing bad breath with instant super-efficient germ-killing action.

Listerine Antiseptic Acts on Many Surfaces

Listerine Antiseptic kills millions of germs on tooth, mouth, and throat surfaces. It kills disease-producing germs as well as many types of odorproducing germs. No tooth paste offers proof like this of killing germs that cause bad breath.

LISTERINE ACTS ON 3 AREAS WHERE BREATH ODORS CAN START

(Continued from Page 6.) holes, were puried where they lay scuttled near by. One of Zane Gray's rumerous yac'its nestles in the mud there, as does an old whaler and two converted sailing ships formerly used in silent movies starring the late Douglas Feirbanks.

The bustling commerce of one of the world's great industrial harbors passes back and forth a scant few yards from this buried port of missing ships. More than a decade has passed since they disappeared from view and, it would seem, that henceforth they could be regarded as relonging to the realm of legend, never again to be seen in substance.

But old ships, like old truths, never completely die, and recent events indicate a strong possibility that the Snark and her forgotten sea mates may not remain forever hidden from sight after all. Even this supposedly last port of call may be denied them. A new harbor expansion program, now in the planning stage, may result in their exhumation

PLANS ARE AFOOT by the Los Angeles Harbor Department for the full utilization of all water frontage, which means that over the years West Basin will become a part of the extensive projected development.

The basin and surrounding area is a potentially valuable piece of harbor property which fell into disuse because shipping companies found that the railroad drawbridge there constituted an obstruction to the free movement of vessels in that section of the harbor. This obstacle has been overcome by a recent agreement with the Southern Pacific Railroad to reroute the railroad tracks, thus opening the area to the harbor's main channel.

As the project develops, dredges will again move in to crean out the inlet. When this happens the Snark and her sister derelicts may once more see the light of day — or, as some waterfront sentimentalists hope— they may be buried even deeper.

The latter fate, oldtime sailors feel, would be a more fitting final destiny for them. Proud vessels, such as these once were, they declare, are entitled to a decent permanent burial the same as those who sailed them.

SANTA ANA.
WITH SUCH A WEALTH of interesting and cultural places to visit in Southern California, maybe you've missed seeing a fascinating place — the Charles W. Bowers Memorial Museum, at 2002 N. Main St.

This "gem" of a museum (founded in 1931) is noted for its artistic building and distinctive grounds. The capable and enthusiastic curator, Mrs. F. H. Coulter, takes delight in showing and explaining the varied exhibits to the many visitors. This museum is open to the public without charge each day (except Monday) from 10 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.; on Thursday evenings from 7 to 9, and on Sundays, from 1 to 5 p. m.

The institution was made possible through the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Bowers, early residents of Santa Ana, who wanted to make a lasting gift to their city. As a result, the community received the Bowers home and lot (on which the museum was later erected), together with a trust fund for the building. With the acceptance of the gift, the city promised to "furnish and maintain for all time, the Charles W. Bowers Memorial Museum."

RELICS OF CALIFORNIA'S PAST EXHIBITED IN SANTA ANA'S MUSEUM

ING, in Spanish style, sits back some distance from the busy street. Its shady courtyard (surrounded by a wall, topped with tiles) is planted with various trees and colorful shrubs such as cotoneasters. In the campanile over the entrance, which is guarded by artistically designed wrought iron gates, some historic bells are hanging. To the right, in the patio, are old-fashioned vehicles, including a massive lumber wagon frame, that was hewn and assembled by hand many decades ago.

In the courtyard, to the left, under a wide-spreading pepper tree, is a great ancient community mortar (metate), with several holes in it. In early days, long before it was brought here from the mountains, Indian women used to gather around it to grind their corn, using rude stone pestles.

Near the museum is an attractive fountain with an historical bas-relief for its background. A statue of Cabrillo, who, in 1542 was the first white man to set foot on the shore of California, stands here, and near by a handsome, curved stairway leads to the veranda above.

THE MUSEUM is well organized and displays early California life during its different eras -the Indian, Spanish and Mexican days. In the hallway is a replica of an old fireplace, constructed of native stone, while around it are antiques, a large and small spinning wheel, a cradle, chairs and cooking utensils.

Also in the corridor are colorful portraits of Spanish dons and their senoras who lived so happily during the "splendid, idle Several scions of early families have lent shrines and other reminders of the religious life of the period.

Relies of native Californians can be found in the museum's Indian Room and its Spanish Room holds many cases of pictures, articles of dress and historical objects of the carefree days of the Spanish dons.

Last of the Saddleback Grizzlies

DEACEFUL RETREATS of the now quiet Santa Ana Mountains of Orange County give little hint today of a more turbulent and dangerous past when giant bears roamed the

Two of these ferocious beasts have become museum pieces, and the last to go down in defeat before civilization's encroachment was a female grizzly known to the natives as "Little Black Bear." She was trapped by the late Andrew Joplin and dispatched by the rifle of W. E. (Ed) Adkinson, Trabuco Canyon rancher, now 82 years old. Her demise came high on the slopes of Saddleback, near Holy Jim Creek. Her skin and skull are now in the U.S. National Museum in Washington, D. C., where they were sent together with the head of one of her contemporaries, "Whiteface," a huge male grizzly.

Another of the great beasts of the final era of bears in this area was "Old Moccasin John."

Records of the 1830 to 1860 period show that there were many grizzlies in the Santa Ana range. Monarchs of the wild, most powerful and formidable of North American animals, these great bears roamed far and wide.

A FAVORITE SPORT of Spanish - American vaqueros (cowboys) was to rope a bear which they called "el oso grande" - and subdue them - a highly dangerous pastime, to put it

Santa Ana vacto in his "Shadows of Old Saddleback" that: "A flat about a mile above Santiago dam was a favorite spet for the vaqueros to lasso the 'oso grande.'

As civilization encreached, the bears moved back into the mountains. After the demise of Moceasin John (alias Old Clubfoot) and Whiteface, aging Little Black Bear roamed alone, finding it increasingly difficult to find food. The Trabuce became her headquarters. In the final seven years of her life she came down from Santiago Peak to steal honey, ruin apiaries and destroy orchards. She had to be killed. Ed Adkinson describes how he and Joplin finally cor-

Bazaar Shows Carpet Styles

These carpets are made of cotton and they are just one of many which will be displayed at Long Beach stores this week during the 1955 Carpet Bazaar.

The magic comes from the carpets' brick-tile pattern, which 'suggests" the outdoors and ranch-style living. The resemblance to the brick or tile floors in patios does the trick.

New floor coverings being shown this year continue to emphasize man-made fibers and new methods of production. Although many all-wool carpets will be shown, more new styles will be made of rayon, nylon and other man-made libers, or a blend of wool with one or all of these.

New fufting processes are making possible many new effects in tufted carpets, all of them important new develop-

Carpet your home WALL-TO-WALL with this luxurious, long-wearing, all-wool carpeting; including carpet, heavy waffle padding, installation, two door metals, sales tax and time charge for only 26.10 DOWN and 13.11 a month. Based on the average size home of 40 sq. yds. for living room, dining room and hall. If you need more or less yardage the price will be adjusted to suit your needs. See these and many other samples in your home. A phone call will bring our "Carpet Car." No obligation, of course.

Early Californian is recognized as the finest buy per dollar in wool carpeting today. Each rug is constructed under close quality controls to weigh approximately six pounds per square yard. This heavy weight gives the rug body and ruggedness and represents built-in quality that will withstand years of hard usage.

The distinctive color patterns blend perfectly with room furnishings and help provide an almosphere of homey charm. Eurly Colifornian carpels are pleasant to live with and continue to give ultimate satisfaction for a long period of time.

Because Early Californian carpets are hand-loomed to sizes you specify, there is no waste. Our modern mathods of looming permit you to buy your carpet by the inch, which means economy for you.

Because of the heavy demand for this line carpet, the mill quotes four to six weeks delivery time. For those who insist on the best—the wait is a short one. If you have been promised delivery in less than FOUR weeks you are not getting "Early Californian." Protect yourself, INSIST ON GENUINE "Early Californian," by BERVEN.

tell the story of Little Black Bear's last stand:

"SHE DIED FIGHTING to the end against three dogs, Andrew (Joplin) and me, ready to rip us to ribbons if we came too near.

"We'd been watching Harvey Groover's apiary way up in the Trabuco. The bear had been coming down from Holy Jim Canyon every night or so. She'd wreck the stands, scrape out the combs and lick up the honey. I noticed she always made a trail in the same place. There was a step-down between two rocks. So Joplin set his bear trap, the biggest we had, and we buried it there.

"George Harris went down to get the huge bear trap that had been set in Santiago Canyon. You serew those big spike-tooth traps down with clevises and use chisels to set the pan. Spring one on your leg, and it's just too had!

"When we came back to Groover's next morning, George didn't show up; he'd broken the tongue on his wagon. We had tied a three-foot piece of railroad iron on the chain of the trap for a drag. Well, the trap and drag were gone. We'd caught Little Black Bear, all right; the tracks were enormous.

"I'd brought my three dogs, a half-hound, who was a mighty good dog, and two Spanish collies. We followed the drag five miles up the mountain in the roughest brush you ever saw. The dogs fanned out ahead, and up near the head of Holy Jim Canyon, in a little side canyon all choked up with chaparral, we caught up with the worst ruckus you ever saw!

"THE GRIZZLY had been trapped by the hind foot. She was on her back clawing the air — had fallen down a bank; trap, drag and all, and the dogs were piled all over her. She was making a kind of roaring noise. My hound got her by the ear, and she threw him 15 feet in the air.

"One of the collies had her by the throat, but she'd caught another with her front claws terrible rippers — and the dogs were getting licked.

"'We'll lose the dogs, Ed,' Andrew yelled. 'Shoot, Ed!'

**SO I LET HER HAVE IT with the .30-.30 Winchester. It took three shots — and half an hour to calm down the dogs.

"Then we dragged the carcass down the mountainside and put up the head and paws on a box for everyone to look at. From the nose to the back of the skull it was 17 inches and the claws were 3½ inches long. Sharp as knives!

"We showed her in Santa Ana and there was a big controversy. Hunters came from everywhere to take a look. 'It's a black bear!' said one. I told them positively it was a grizzly, even if her color was dark. They come in all shades: brown, cinnamon, silvery and dark. The long claws told the story. Why, even a Kodiak bear that I saw once didn't have such fearful claws, and a California black bear has short ones. She was poorly; only weighed about 650 pounds, for it had been hard pickings for seven years. 'An old female coast grizzly,' they wrote Andrew from Washington. There hasn't been a grizzly in the range since.

"Like the old days; they're gone for good."

Carpets Have 'Plus' Value

Important functional qualities of carpets — their effectiveness in muffling unwanted noise, their soft comfort, warmth, ease of cleaning, and the safety against falls they bring into a home, have all been taken for granted by many homemakers.

Today, with many families using rooms and areas for double, triple and even more diverse purposes, soft floor covering has become vitally necessary. The various functional qualities of carpets and rugs — the plus benefits they add to a home—are being welcomed in homes where the open-floor plan poses special problems to achieve comfortable and quiet living.

Homemakers are finding the use of wall-to-wall carpeting or room-size rugs make for easy care. All that is needed is a weekly cleaning with a vacuum cleaner and a daily brush-up with a carpet sweeper. For heavily trafficked areas, more frequent vacuuming may be necessary, but floor mops, various kinds of floor polishes, etc., are no longer a problem.

CARPETING will cover the roughest floors, giving a comfortable, homelike look to rooms regardless of the condition or type of floors. With a carpet pad underneath, a soft cushioned tread is achieved. Carpeting with proper underpads does much to add a quiet, restful atmosphere for the family.

Another functional feature of carpets is that of lending a coordinated unity, when decorating. It has long been known that carpeting will "pull together" a decorative scheme in harmonious beauty, adding a finished in viting appearance as nothing else can.

With so many "plus" values in each square yard of carpet, to-day's homemakers find right at hand the answer to many pressing problems of living in the average small house being built these days.

Color Dominates New Carpets

NEW CARPET PATTERNS

are done chiefly in a contemporary manner with overall, random, textured and tweed effects in shades of blue, beige and other popular colors. The first machine-made carpet with gold metallic threads for accents is heing introduced. Traditional floral patterns and Oriental rug effects are also shown.

These effects in the new carpets are complemented by the new styles and patterns in linoleums, vinyl plastics and other smooth-surface floor coverings. Designs are color-fleeked to give the same textured appearance seen in the carpets.

Despite all the new developments, many of the tried and true rules for buying carpets still hold, say the experts.

The first consideration, they ay, is "whose foot will be put down on the carpet? In other words, who will be using the room where the rug is placed? The problem is to select the proper weave for each type of use.

Halis and children's rooms, naturally, get a lot of foot traffic and a carpet must wear well and not show the dirt. Tweeds, homespuns and indistinct designs do well in this assignment.

QUIET COLORS are favorites for bedrooms. And for the general living areas, the choice of lively or subdued tones depends on personal desires and the style of your home. The experts say there are four major types of woven rugs to choose from.

Axminster is one of the most popular weaves today. It is available in many colors and patterns -- and prices, which are determined by the rows of tufts to the inch, the pile height and the weight of the wool.

Velvet is the first carpet to be woven on a broadloom - a term, incidentally, which refers to the width of the carpet and not to the type. Weven without seams, velvet is smooth, soft carpeting. It has a dense pile.

The "aristocrat of carpeting" is the Wilton. Its features are the distinct patterns and clear colors. The pattern shows on both sides.

Most expensive, strongest and most beautiful is the chenille carpet, which is generally custom-made. It is often woven on a broadloom to widths up to

Along with the new colors, Mrs. Brahms says that our less rigid adherence to "period purhas enlarged the scope of use in rug patterns. Geometric designs, for instance, can be used harmoniously with both classic and contemporary styles; hooked patterns, once regarded as suitable for colonial furniture only, are now being used with contemporary furniture.

The use of carpeting will increase, Mrs. Brahms feels, because "they serve as 'shock absorbers' against the fatigues of today's high-voltage living." Mrs. Brahms explained that carpeting not only cushions heel shock, but likewise absorbs sound. Furthermore, there is a safety factor involved. Carpeting prevents slipping, cushions falls - and thus promotes greater safety.

The interest in "off-beat" shades which began as a trickle during 1954 will emerge as a definite trend during 1955, prediets Mrs. Brahms, who is recognized as one of the pace-setters in the decorating field.

"Bright blues will be used in combination with vivid green; pinks and reds will be frequently seen in the same room," says Mrs. Brahms.

Although Mrs. Brahms indicated that such colors would be used for pillows and other accent pieces in rooms, she believes that the carpeting either wall-to-wall or room-sized rugs — will dictate the colors for the room, "Carpeting colors will be vibrant, with such tones as peacock blue, turquoise, shrimp or coral establishing the basic color scheme." Monotone colors, including the greys and greens popular a short time ago, will he less frequently employed. Gold will remain a strong popularity contender.

A Burkey electric fish screen guards the entrance to a zone dangerous for fish. The screen gives fish a slight electric shock, guiding them away.

Now It's Traffic Lights for Fish!

By John Ronson

ENRY T. BURKEY, Los Angeles inventor and game fish authority, may go down in history as the man who brought law and order to the "highways" traveled by salmon, trout and other finny citizens on their way to and from the spawning grounds. After years of research, Burkey, with the aid of the California Bureau of Fisheries, has perfected a system of traffic lights to guide fish away from danger zones such as river power projects and irrigation canals. The device is said to be one of the greatest boons to fish conservation efforts ever developed.

Success of Burkey's gadget in saving the lives of millions of fish annually is attributed to his discovery that the denizens of the deep are attracted to bright lights just like moths and, if the lights are moving, will follow them as Mary's lamb followed Mary. Also, the younger the fish, the greater the lure lights have for them an important factor in the endless battle of conservationists to reduce the high "infant" mortality rate of edible fish.

A major problem of conservation has concerned newly-hatched salmon on their annual migration down rivers to the ocean. The fingerlings commit suicide by the tens of thousands when they inadvertently enter irrigation canals and power diversion tun-

BEFORE THE DAYS of great power projects and inland waterway development programs the hazard was a negligible one, but the tremendously increased activity of this kind in recent years the problem of keeping migrating fish out of these death traps has grown until it menaces the entire fishing industry. The salmon catch, particularly, has been reduced to an alarming extent in the last decade - in some regions as much as 50 per cent - while trout and other species have suffered similar slaughter.

Burkey's method of controlling fish traffic is inexpensive, efficient and surprisingly simple. It consists of a series of bright moving lights suspended from steel cables above the water. The "traffie" signals are strung across the entrance to irrigation ditches, mouths of diversion tunnels and other danger zones. Special, high-intensity bulbs flash on and off like the moving border on theater marquees and form rippling arrows of light pointing in the direction of the safe channel.

"We were amazed to find how powerful a lure the lights created," Burkey declared, "In more than a hundred tests made over a three-year period, not a single fish disobeyed the warning and entered the traps. They followed the traffic lights like law-abiding motorists under the eye of highway patrolmen until they were safely past the danger areas."

TWO OTHER TYPES of light signals are now being tested. One is a spectacular 100-foot-(Continued on Page 30.).

46 YEARS IN LONG BEACH

By Charles Neiswender

IN SPANISH, la parida means pregnant woman. Capitalized, La Parida means the same thing but is the name of a mountain in Venezuela that soon will mean refrigerators, stoves, pots and pans, automobiles for homes in Long Beach.

La Parida, named because of its shape, is a mountain of almost pure iron ore deep in the jungles.

Engineers renamed the mountain Cerro Bolivar when they began reshaping the great mound of iron. Although far from the Southland, La Parida will prove a prolific mother for people here.

Its history and discovery are mingled with the conquistadores of centuries ago and modern science. The Spanish conquerors found, then lost it, while scientists of today found and are exploiting it.

Explorers following the forays of Spanish soldiers of a century and a half before made a startling discovery near Mundo Nuevo in Venezuela in the late 1800s.

A rudimentary blast furnace and a stack of iron ingots were uncovered from dense jungle growth. The ingots have been preserved as museum pieces.

The discovery had more than historic value, however, for they gave credence to legends of "mountains of red earth" in the Venezuelan wilds.

grows at the drop of a bucket. All you have to do, Hawaiians say, is plant it, pour on the water and get out of the way, quick.

The best known use for ti is in hula skirts, those swishing fronds that sway from the hips of native dancers.

One of its least known uses is as a flag of truce, used by New Guinea natives in tribal warfare.

It is also baked for eating, woven into baskets, made into sleds and turned into "oke" (okolebao), Hawaii's own brand of moonshine.

Several years ago Dr. Harold L. Lyon, then director of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters Assn. experiment station, discovered tiwas one of the world's best potential sources of levulose, a type of fruit sugar.

THE SWEETEST and most soluble of all sugars, levulose has been used in medicine and in the food industry. It has filled an important need in intravenous feeding and for the treatment of diabetes. Its unique, delicate flavor has added to the quality of jams, preserves and baked goods.

Following HSPA's preliminary laboratory work a pilot extrac-tion plant was set up at Grove Farm on Kauai Island.

The early experimenters called levulose "the sugar of the fu-ture" but W. M. Moragne, manager of Grove Farm, says many problems remain unsolved and it will be some time before levulose from ti becomes a practical, commercial reality.

Trouble is the ti plant, though high in levulose content, is tough. It's hard to harvest, hard to clean and so far the cost of extracting levulose from it is too high to be an economical success.

"When and if we get the cost down low enough we may have a new industry," Moragne said.

Till then, the cost of the ti leaf itself doesn't come too high for hula skirts.

There's something about those ad libs that television comics dish up that "send" you. And how! And where?

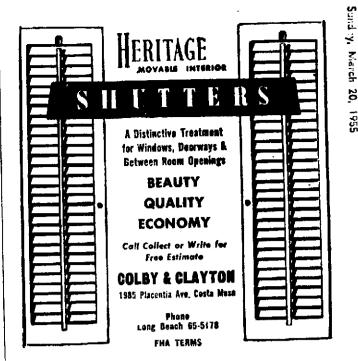

Arthur Godfrey shows never go before the cameras, and are never heard.

They are the people he keeps looking at offstage and who frequently cause him to snort with laughter and frown with anger. I say, let him bring these people out in the open so the rest of us can get something out of his programs.

I remember Arthur Godfrey when he was an entertainer. That was before he became tired, bored and condescending.

I say all this with the knowledge that millions of people like Godfrey and watch him regularly. All I can reply is that that doesn't prove a thing.

Millions have watched Million Berle, too.

By Harry Karns

MY WIFE and I were sitting across the room from the television set the other night reading books when she got a sensational idea.

"Say," she said, "why not turn the television set on?

I said: "So early in the year?" She said: "Look, be broadminded. Frankly, I'm getting tired of reading 'The Three Bears.' "

So I turned the set on and sat down again. Soon Arthur Godfrey peered out quizzically from under heavy eyelids and said something which was very funny but which we didn't catch.

"Well," said my wife, "I guess we tried. Turn it off."

"I've already made one trip over there," I told her. "It's your turn."

"I'm reading The Three Bears," she said.

So that's how I came to watch my Arthur Godfrey program of 1955. I wouldn't say it's the best way to start a new year. In fact, I would say it's the worst. And I'm not prejudiced against tea, either.

Although I am determined to be nasty about this, I want to be fair, too.

So let me say for the record that Arthur Godfrey has a neat part in his hair.

"Holy smake."

- "Well, well, well,"
- "Golly whiz."
- "Heh, heh." "Huh, huh."

I ask you, who needs to hire writers when he can ad lib like

The answer is: Arthur Godfrey.

ANOTHER THING that bothers me is that the funniest and most dramatic people on the

Hilo Omelet

- ¼ bunch celery
- 2-ounce can bean sprouts
- 2 tablespoon cooking oil
- ¼ pound shredded raw chicken, veal or chopped fish
- tablespoon soy sauce
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 4 cggs
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- ½ tablespoon cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon cold water

Cut onions and celery lengthwise into thin shreds about onehalf inch long. Drain bean sprouts. Heat oil in skillet and add the shredded raw chicken, veal or chopped fish, and stir one minute. Add celery and vegetables and stir one minute more. Add soy and sugar and cook at high heat one minute longer. Then remove ingredients. Into the same skillet measure one additional tablespoon oil. When warm, pour in lightly beaten eggs to which salt has been added. Do not stir; lift around the edges occasionally to make sure it does not burn. When eggs are half set put in the meat and vegetable mixture, well drained from the juice. Fold over into an omelet and cook each side one minute. If gravy is desired, make it from the juice of the meat and vegetables. There should be about one-half cupful. To it add the cornstarch mixed with the cold water. Cook and stir until clear, pour over omelet and serve

1 cup long rice (raw)

1/4 cup chopped green onions

4 tbls. cooking oil (preferable peanut oil)

Fry bacon in heavy skillet. Add milk to eggs and scramble in bacon drippings. Remove eggs, add chopped bacon and set aside. Pour oil into skillet and add raw and stirring constantly till browned. Add one cup of water, and simmer till done. Pour ½ cup water with ½ cup of soy and add to rice, stirring well, Add egg and bacon mixture with onions and simmer 20 minutes before serving.

Bean Sprouts With Pork
Slice ½ pound of lean pork into very thin slices. Mix with 1 teaspoon cornstarch, 1 tablespoon soy sauce and two or three aper-thin slices of fresh ginger. (Ginger is optional.) Heat one crushed clove of garlic in one tablespoon oil. Remove garlic. Add meat mixture to oil and stir until brown. Add one package bean sprouts and one chopped green onion. Stir well, cover tightly and cook slowly five to seven minutes.

This new family room of the Ralph Miller home incorporates a fireplace, an item the family dearly wanted. View is from new kitchen pass-through.

Clever Tricks Re-Do

Provision of pass-through counter links the kitchen to the family room, brings Mrs. Miller out of "isolation."

By Eileen Ball

IT HAS BEEN SAID that when it comes to building or buying a house, "location is everything."

This, like so many other easily coined maxims is, of course, an exaggeration. A house, be it good or bad, is composed of so many factors that usually it is difficult to attribute its success or blame its failure on any one feature.

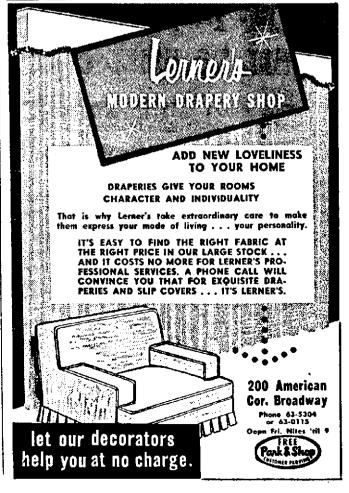

But there can be no doubt that neighborhood or site is one of the most important elements of all to consider in the anticipation of a home.

First of all, the vicinity one chooses for residence should be reasonably handy to the breadwinner's work. It should be near schools for families with children. Mother usually has an eye for walking distance to the nearest grocery store. These are physical factors to be weighed before that all-important step is to be taken.

But there is something else very important about the neighborhood. It is, perhaps, a more nebulous thing, harder to evaluate. In short, the neighborhood should "feel right." Which means it must have the sort of friendly quality that suits the family's need for an "at home" feeling. Without that, the swankest, loveliest vicinity would be a poor choice, indeed.

AND FOR THIS very factor, many families refuse to move away from their old, "at home" neighborhoods even when the size or style of their house no longer suits them. To be near familiar stores, to keep the children with their companions at school — these things sometimes are far more attractive than a new house some place else in the city.

A case in point is the Ralph Miller family. Mr. and Mrs. Miller and their three sons have been long-time residents of Belmont Shore. They had outgrown the little pseudo-Spanish stuccohouse at 212 St. Joseph Ave. And not only was the place too eramped; it was lacking in a number of other features.

It had no fireplace (something which the family wanted with an ever-growing intensity). The house had the closed-in feeling so typical of a house of its 25-year-old vintage. The windows were small and there were none of the newer architectural niceties that allows one to sit inside and enjoy a vista of what is growing up and going on outdoors. This unhappy little dwelling turned in upon itself (and upon the family) until the whole situation became very sorry, indeed.

But the family could not tolerate the idea of moving from the Shore.

As is the case in most established and desirable neighborhoods, Belmont Shore is built up to the hilt. There are virtually no lots available for building. So the solution was obvious. Either the Millers would have to content themselves with their house as it was, or they would have to look for another home already built in the immediate vicinity.

THEIR CHOICE was sound when they decided to stay right where they were and go all out to remodel their old home. They knew just exactly of what the construction of the house consisted. And they had taken plenty of time to think out just what kind of changes it would take to bring it up to date.

The facade of the white stucco bungalow with its sad little eyebrow of red tile was completely renovated. With it went the three-section window (that actually consisted of three skinny arches overlooking the front yard), a window that admitted very little sunshine and was pitifully difficult to curtain.

Over the old "shell" was built sparkling new front that certainly gives little hint as to what went on before. A modern roof topped with white crushed rock rises over the new upstairs "half story." And a handsome flat roof wings out over the driveway to create a carport (additional to the garage) that adds an important feeling of width to the house that now makes the most of its rather narrow frontage. A picture window replaces the old-timer. Now, lovely traverse draperies may be drawn back to admit more sunshine and light than the Millers ever realized was available to their living room!

Removal of an old-fashioned archway between the dining and living rooms transformed the living room into one big area — 13x26 feet.

The walls of this room have been painted a soft taupe that blends nicely with the cocoa cotton shag wall-to-wall carpeting. Draperies containing cocoa, lime and rust tones help tie the Millers' new cocoa and leaf green upholstered pieces into the scheme.

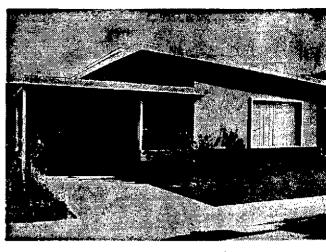

One entire end of the living room — the wall separating the room from the kitchen and playroom beyond — has been paneled in katsura, an interestingly grained, nut-colored wood.

The kitchen, completely rejuvenated, is a thing of sheer beauty to anyone who appreciates fine craftsmanship in cabinet design. Made of Finnish birch, a blond wood with swirl

Cactus Camel of the Desert

VISITORS to the historic city of Tucson exclaim in amazement and disbelief at their first glimpse of the saguaro cactus forest, truly a wilderness almost beyond belief. This amazing desert giant, limited in its range to northwestern Mexico and Arizona, reaches its maximum size and densest stand in the desert area making up the 57,000 acres of the Saguaro National Monument, 17 miles east of Tucson.

The massive columnar saguaro creates a dense leafless forest that looks like a bizarre bit of another world transplanted to this sphere. It requires a thick stand of trees, however, to make a forest and surely no cactus can rank as a forest tree! But one look here and all doubts are quickly erased. There the saguaro stands, massive trunks from two to three feet in diameter, often reaching 50 feet in height and weighing as much as 12 tons. The stand in places is as dense as that of the yellow pine in the Rockies or even that of the red pine in Michigan and Minnesota or of the long-leaf pine in the South.

THE SAGUARO receives its nickname as the "camel" of the Arizona desert because of its amazing ability to store up water for prolonged dry spells. Like other cacti, the saguaro is composed entirely of a green stem which enables it to conserve wa-(Continued on Page 31.)

... thanks to ANTIZYME, the first continuous-action anti-enzyme tooth paste.

Actual, living proof !... this new, completely different kind of tooth paste really stopped decay!

HERE'S WHY... I. No other type of tooth pasto—regular, ammoniated or chlorophyll—protects for more than ½ hour.

Stops the major cause of tooth decay every minute of every day

2. Each Brushing Protects 12-24 Hours! Now, Antizyme, the first continuous-action anti-enzyme tooth paste, stops the major cause of tooth decay 12 to 24 hours with each brushing. This has been proved for 9 out of every 10 long "necklace" of light bulbs suspended on stainless steel towers which support an endless cable of moving lights. Another experiment utilizes a rotating searchlight to give the illusion of moving lights.

Inventor Burkey is an old hand at playing traffic cop for fish. He solved part of the fish guidance puzzle years ago by inventing the electric fish screen "fence." The screen, placed across dangerous river channels and ditch entrances, gave slight electric shocks to fish to warn them away. After a while, however, some species of fish learned to disregard the fence and some of the bolder aquatic creatures even forced their way through it or chewed at the electrodes, which resulted in the electrocution of the fish.

Nothing like that can happen to the new fish traffic regulators since they are out of reach of finny violators and, besides, Burkey points out, fish love that light!

World's Biggest Hunk of Iron

CERRO BOLIVAR, a mountain of red earth 11 miles long, a mile wide, and 2,000 feet high, is estimated to contain enough iron to supply the peacetime needs of the United States "through the lifetimes of children to be born in the next generation."

The iron content of the mountain is so high it fouled electromagnetic equipment used in iron prospecting from airplanes. It was not until data gathered by the mechanism was analyzed that the vastness of the find was realized.

In 1911, an intensive mining effort was made at the deposit but by 1913 the enterprise failed because the yield of 70,000 tons of ore exhausted the supply.

El Pao, another immense deposit like Cerro Bolivar, is held by Bethlehem Steel. Bethlehem first held the property in the 1920s, let the option lapse, and later repurchased the concession. First ore deliveries are expected in 1955.

But it was United States Steel which ended up with Cerro Boli-

Mack C. Lake, of Berkeley, who died recently, was with the M. A. Hanna Co., a firm of mining enginers, in New York when Bethlehem let its option on El Pao lapse in the 1920s.

It was Hanna more than anyone else who believed in Venezuela as an iron ore source and pushed development of El Pao.

UNITED STATES STEEL acquired Lake's services in 1946 to search out ore for that corporation. Up to then, small pockets had been found in the area; companies had gone broke developing them, and the idea that no economically sound deposits were present was submerging the urge to find sorely needed resources.

World War II has sapped this country's reserve by 350,000,000 tons of ore from the rich deposits of northern Michigan and Minnesota.

Steel and military experts realized a reserve for war of one billion tons of high grade ore was needed, but American deposits were nearing exhaustion.

To meet the changing picture, United States Steel and Lake labored for almost two years in the Venezuelan jungles to find Cerro Bolivar.

Lake and his enginers could not believe their findings. Samples from the surface and deep in the mountain showed ratings of 63 per cent Iron. Tests were run and re-run to verify the findings or, really, to show the enginers they must have made mistakes.

It is estimated that United States Steel, for reasons of maintaining a safe reserve for emergency, will mine no more than 10,000,000 tons annually at Cerro Bolivar.

To process the ore, a vast new steel plant is being constructed near Trenton, N. J. The ore will travel by rail to the coast of Venezuela, by ship across the Atlantic Ocean, and up the Delaware River to Trenton.

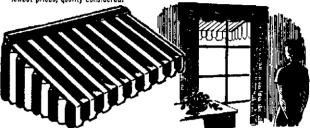

From the Great Lakes ore regions, ships travel 1,370 miles to reach the steel foundries of the east. From Venezuela the distance is 2,120 miles, but the ore is richer, Power for the mining of Cerro Bolivar will come from the oil and natural gas areas north of the mountain of iron. The ore rail line will cross the vast oil fields on its way to the coast.

For a plant that rarely exceeds 50 feet in height, the saguaro is one of the heaviest and most massive members of the vegetable kingdom. Its erect trunk and gracefully curving branches absorb as much as six or seven tons of water during a rainy period and can go as long as three years without replenishing its supply.

Because of the intake of water in a rainy season and the gradual loss of much of it in dry periods, there are great variations in the diameter of the trunk.

WHEN THE STEMS are gorged with water, the spiny ridges are far apart, and the grooves between them are shallow. When the water content is low, the diameter of the whole stem is less, the ridges are closer together, and the grooves are narrow and deep.

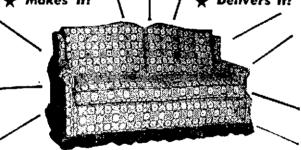

A large portion of the tissue of the saguaro is much like an unripe watermelon. There is a central skeleton of woody ribs, forming a cylinder, however, that is remarkably stout at the base and tapering to slender, unconnected rods near the top of the cactus.

For all its massive bulk and strength, the saguaro is highly susceptible to hacterial decay during the wet season and is easily destroyed. A bullet wound or the slash of a knife has been known to kill a 50-foot, 12-ton tree. For that reason the Saguaro National Monument was created in 1933 to protect this desert type of plant life not found elsewhere in the United States. For tourists in the Tueson area, a trip to the Monument affords a never-to-be-forgotten vista.

They Tamed the Outlaw Rivers

For the first time in history, a Hollywood For the first time in history, a Hollywood movie company has photographed the treacherous San Juan and Colorado Rivers along their wildest stretches, from Mexican Hat, Utah, to Marble Canyon, Ariz., 200 danger-fraught miles, in making "Smoke Signal," a "western on the water." Camera and work crews were carefully selected by Producer Howard Christie and Director Jerry Hopper for ability to swim ride horseback and rough it noward Christie and Director Jerry Hopper for ability to swim, ride horseback and rough it in the open for an eight-day period. The story of "Smoke Signal" involves a small cavalry patrol and a woman who make escape from Indians down river. Duna Andrews, Piper Laurie and Rex Reason are the stars, but real heroes of film ware comermen who rode wildheroes of film were camermen who rode wildly plunging boats through vicious waters to film the picture. True idea of the hazards can only be gained from film; here are some stills.

Off to wild adventure! "Smoke Signal" boats start perilous adventure in San Juan Canyon. Once started, there was no way to turn back.

Ace cinematographer Cliff Stine rides a boat through the wild waters of a rapids, with an expert "river rat" at the pars. Plunging action of the boat will give movie audiences seeing the picture the thrill of a wild ride.

Flat boats aground on sand bars and quicksand, stove in on rocks or awash in treacherous currents were part of the film plot, a real-life, everyday prospect of the crews working on the movie. Old "river rats" lauded crewmen.

The Call of Inner Holiness

or for that matter, yeararound reading — is "Meditations of a Believer," by Marcel Legaut (Knopf, $3.75), which already has won recognition in postwar Europe as a modern Christian classic. Many persons consider it a modern sequel to "Imitation of Christ," thought to have been written by Thomas a' Kempis, Dutch religious of the 15th Century.

Addressed to persons of all ages who aspire to a personal religious life and feel the call to a vocation of inner holiness, it consists for the most part of a series of moving meditations on the life of Jesus and its meaning for our times. Interspersed with these meditations are prayer-conversations between the Lord and the soul—the soul of the Christian alone in the modern city of our times.

Typical of the thought and universal appeal of the book: "Jesus wants to act in the world only with the co-operation of men. We are all providential agents in the immense work that is God's on earth; we all have something to do.... We must not close our eyes to the fact that if we refuse to give God what He asks of us, what we can give, something is forever lost, not only for us, but for all the others; we have, in some measure, blocked the plan of God."—V. W.

A STAR SPARKLES: At 50. Clifton Fadiman, who has had a turn at just about everything in writing and publishing but authoring a book, has done just that. And it is well worth waiting for. His "Party for One" (World, $5) is one of the most sparkling and refreshing things we've run across in a long (too long) time. Because they are generally written in conversational style, most of the seleccauseries though Mr. Fadiman chooses to refer to some of them as casays and reviews, and some, written to precede the book-length work of others, as prefaces. Basking in the brilliant light of his style, these causeries, or essays, sharply illuminate many famous writers Sinclair Lewis, E. B. White, William Faulkner, Ernest Hemingway and G. B. Shaw, to mention a few --- and what they have written. He discusses his own trade, too, particularly book reviewing, of which he is a master, often caustically and always with appropriate wit. And his prefatory remarks on reaching 50 should cause some older readers to reappraise where they think they may have failed and look back on their lives with satisfac-

THE SOUTH OF OLD: Runaway slaves, life on a plantation and the birth of a great song all blend to make "The Freedom Song" by Neill C. Wilson (Holt, $3.50) a fine story about the old South.

The fictional story of how "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" originated is intensely moving and sincere, conveying the great dream of freedom of the southern Negro. Wilson will not disappoint the millions of readers of his SatEvePost stories with this one.—F. T. H.

Gladys Everets Brown

The adventures of a busy little ferry boat, working within sight of every type of craft from tiny tugs to glamorous ocean-going liners, are excitingly told for small fry in "Two-Bow Bill," a handsome little volume by a talented San Pedro author, Gladys Everets Brown (Morrow, $2). And, as if that were not enough for South Coast readers, the shiny dust jacket and inside drawings by Jay Hyde Barnum are from photographs of the San Pedro-Terminal Island ferry.

CONTROL OF CONTROL OF

NIGHT OF TERROR: Just past 13 and just begun upon a new life, Sarah Lou Gross is a strange child, full of fanciful tales that her townspeople have learned not to believe. day, from her study hall window, she witnesses a brutal murder. Now caught up in a day and night of stalking terror, she can tell no one - for who would Anne Chamberlain's first novel, "The Tall Dark Man" (Bobbs Merrill, $3) is also the story of a girl's first 13 years, and is far more than a whodunit. It's well-told, interesting, worth reading .-- G. C. F.

THE BIRD WORLD: Without doubt, the most comprehensive and the most beautiful gle volume ever published about our feathered friends is "Birds of the World: Their Life and Habits" (Oxford University Press, $12.50). Certainly it is by far the most entertaining. Monotonous descriptive passages, supported by endless footnotes and references, are lacking. In their place are answers to all the questions likely to be asked about this or that bird - mating, nesting habits, how the various birds feed their families, temperament, migratory habits, and so on — supported by countless photographs, drawings and paintings of birds in their natural habitat, many of them in beautiful color. Artist-naturalist Paul Barruel, who authored the book, had the help of eminent naturalists and ornithologists in the preparation of his material. Readers are going to be amazed that such a book can be made casual and absorbing. F. T. K.

ers, has written another inspirational book. It is "My Spiritual Diary" (Revell, $2), which she calls her "faith, hope, philosophy and spiritual adventuring, that I may know how weak and strong I am." Here are the fine thoughts of a noble actress as she goes before the movie and television cameras to entertain millions, and they will give strength to those seeking strength. And like her first book, all royalties go to the Clinic for the Study of Mental Retardation, Children's Hospital Society of Los Angeles. -F. T. K.

Strange Towers of a Hobby

Weird-by normal standards-are the towers and spires of the unusual home of Sam Rodia of Watts. It's made of steel, concrete, bits of this and that.

By Keith Kerwin

ECENTLY a young couple and their very young daughter stood on the sidewalk before the residence of Sam Rodia at 1765 E. 107th St. in Watts. The three of them stared in silence for several minutes at the home. Then the little girl asked: "Daddy, what in the world is it?"

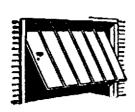

What, indeed! For before them they saw a maze of arches, pagodas and towers, and all this enclosed by the oddest wall they had ever seen. Though they didn't know it at the time, this family was viewing the fantastic results of more than 30 years of activity in one of the world's most unusual hobbies.

Made of steel and covered with cement, these amazing structures have literally thousands upon thousands of brightly colored bits of shell, glass and pottery imbedded in them. Fifteen thousand alone were used to add color. A close look at this landmark, for that is what it has become, reveals an uninhibited form and pattern designed to satisfy the wildest artistic imagination. The long wall is made of arched panels, each equally

Over the sink and the new built-in electric range is a passthrough counter that opens into the new family room, a spacious 18x30-foot area which devotes itself strictly to good times.

This room fulfills a great many of the desires of the Millers, features that at one time had them thinking in terms of moving to a newer house. It has a welcoming open fireplace of red brick. One wall paneled in katsura has doors that open to reveal a giant television screen behind one, a phonograph behind another, while still other cabinets devote themselves to storage.

Set just below the serving counter from the kitchen is their dining set. Therefore it is with the greatest of ease that Mrs. Miller serves dinner to the family and to guests right from her revitalized kitchen. She is able to participate in the conversation that bubbles in the family room, and she can even see the television from her place of honor at the range!

Lastly, the new family room opens wide to the privacy of the walled patio through glass doors. Here, then, is the sort of indooroutdoor living they wanted to find. And they found it right in their own back yard!

STAIRS from the family room lead up to the new second story that contains three bedrooms for the boys. Paneled in various woods and decorated in their favorite colors, each is enjoying his very own room for the housing of his particular hobby. One has his own radio and record player, another has a fine phonograph, while the third has his own television set!

Downstairs, the master bedroom has been redecorated. is located to the rear of the house, and so its windows overlook the seclusion of the patio. The Millers are finding welcome peace, too, in having their room located a considerable distance from the sleeping and studying rooms of their three boys!

The second bedroom, that formerly did triple duty for the boys as a bedroom and catchall, now devotes itself to Miller's office activities.

A Pony in Their Lives

By Eleanor Avery Price

FTEN there is a story behind the desire of a family for a certain kind of pet. Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur L. Finley, 2918 Hul-St., had a reason why they winted and now own a Shetland

When the Finleys' son, Robert, was a lat of about 12, Finley bought him a Shetland pony and supplied a eart. To the child's disappointment, the pony mistrusted the cart and refused ever to pull it. No other pony was forthcoming, so through the venus Robert vowed that when he had children of his own, they would semehow have a Shetland page that would pull a cart with children riding in it.

When Robert raised his children, he did not live where he could keep an equine of any sort, but Wilbur Finley, now a gramifather, lived just on the odgs of the county, and one excities day he brought home for all his grandchildren an almost exper replier of Robert's pony of yest private. And Beauty that is her name - would and does pull a cort, as the picture with this article clearly shows.

Always hopeful that some day a Sherland pony would again be in the family, both Wilhur and Robert Finley had collected scrups of leather which eventurily were made into a handsome burness. Some of the leather came from war-forn Germany, where Robert was in U. S. mili-tary service. Some was saved from a gasoline engine belt. Order pieces were gleaned from here and there.

The cart is handmade out of two descarded but perfectly good biegets where is and scraps of moist and pipes welded together. Parared a gleaming yellow, it is as snoppy a do-it-yourself item is wer you saw.

That first tiny trickle grew to a brook, the brook widened and became an outlaw river, and the river came swirling out of the mountains to build a great lake covering 20,000 square miles of the Coachella and Imperial Val-

Centuries later the Colorado had patiently burrowed a new channel through the silt dam it had built below the site of the present town of Yuma and once more flowed tranquilly into the sea, rebuilt the silt dam higher up and the valley lake vanished in the mist, sucked dry by the blazing sun.

And that was uncounted centuries ago, in a time which no man knows. There is conclusive evidence that the mighty river changed its course again and again as the slow years went by, refilling the dry land-locked valley with water that lay, for a period of time, like a great banner of shimmering blue and silver between the barrier mountains. After each rebirth of Lake Cahuilla (so-called by the Indians) the river went back to its normal course and the lake disappeared.

IN 1891 the Colorado breached its banks again and poured a flood into the Salton Sink, forming a fair sized lake.

For a few years, then, the Colorado was quiet. An irrigation project brought water from the Colorado through a series of canals and in a few years more than 150,000 acres of hitherto worthless valley land was producing a variety of crops in amazing volume.

Early in 1905 the great river, swollen by floods poured into it by its eight tributary streams, once more broke over its banks and came thundering down ancient canyons, into the Salton

The story of the gallant fight to control the raging river has been told many times. The late Edward Kosin of San Pedro was in charge of one of the Southern Pacific railroad work trains sent in to help close the breach in the riverbank.

IN THE VALLEY there is a

opinion concerning the cause of

the runoff of irrigation water.

If they are correct in their contention then the sea is certain to keep on rising because the government, only last month, au-

more feeder canals and laterals to bring water to the presently dry Indian lands. Unless a method of controlling or storing this

shoreline inevitably must expand. Another group holds that the sea is rising primarily because of seepage of salt water from the Pacific. They point to the now hidden boiling mud pots as

"We dumped nearly 100,000 tons of big rocks into the break in two weeks," Kosin said. saw gangs of Mexican and Indian workers lever two-ton boulders over the side of flatcars on the trestle and the river would grab the rocks and toss them around like tennis balls."

IT WAS FIGHT to a finish with men and machines pitted against the terrible power of the river, with the rich Coachella and Imperial Valleys as the prize. Man was victorious and the river, after a million outlaw years, has been fettered by dams and locks and irrigation outlets and now flows peacefully down to its normal delta and loses itself in the sea.

The Colorado today appears to have surrendered to man's will and the low desert seems solid and safe at last. And yet, in the light of relatively recent developments in this below-sea-level paradise, the valley may still be shadowed by peril.

Five years ago, after half a century of peace, the Colorado sent another brooklet to scout the Salton Sea. This was the runoff of irrigation water from the All-American canal which has made this valley one of the garden spots of the world. As new laterals were added to the PARIS.

It seems to me that Paris is just as high-priced in the winter as it is in the summer when the tourists jam the boulevards. I do have a list of restaurants, recommended by Jacques Lemoine of the Societe des Produits Europeens. The full routine for about 1000 francs ($3). Yours for a stamped envelope.

"What was the name of the restaurant where they serve Elizabethan food in London?"

THAT WAS the Gore Hotel in Queensgate. Ask for the Elizabethan Room. Serves peacock, Good King Henry (which is nothing but spinach), mulled winc, snuff and other goodies of the Sir Walter Raleigh era. About $5.

"My husband and I are going to Mexico in May, What kind of clothes should we take? We want to see some night clubs."

One dark suit and one dinner dress is plenty for Mexico City. It's fairly warm in May so light sports clothing is good for day-time. Probably be raining some. I prefer a short umbrella to a raincoat in the tropics. The tropic rain is usually short and hard rather than drizzly. And a raincoat is apt to be too warm.

"I would like some good maps of England and London and France..."

The best on France are the Michelin maps. The one marked

"Grand Routes de France" is excellent and covers the whole area. Michelin also breaks these down into sectional maps.

I am not sure of the cost of these. But you can get them through the Libraire Français, Rockefeller Center, New York City, the City of Paris, San Francisco, or you might try a large local book store.

The English maps are available through the British Tourist Association, 336 Madison Ave., New York City.

There is a colored map of London with a lot of little drawings that I have and is sold in various places in England. I think you could get it by writing to British Travel Association, 64-65 St. James' St., London, S.W. 1, England. As I remember, the price was about $3. But you'd better ask first.

The only identifying marks I find on it are: "Messrs. Sydney Walton and W. E. Bevan," plus a notation that it is "published by the Travel Association of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland."

HOW TO Protect Many Items Around Your Home by Using Shellac

1. PRESERVE CHAIR SEATS. Rush, split cane, twisted paper, or cord chair seats are easily preserved with very thin shellac. Work shellac of 1-pound cut into material with brush, and repeat to get sufficient body. The treatment will brighten color and prevent dirt from becoming embedded. Several coats will restore the body of a backed hooked rug or carpet and keep it flat on the floor.

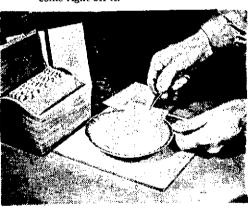

2. WALLPAPER SHIELD, Brush, or possibly even spray, thin white shellac around switches, sinks, stoves, or on walls in children's room to make wallpaper truly washable. Test on wallpaper sample first. While the white shellac normally won't alter colors, it may change the reflective properties. Two coats protect wall decorations such as maps, magazine covers or travel posters. Be very careful that color doesn't smear in alcohol.

3. GARDEN TOOLS. To protect garden tools in off-season storage, scrub with water and dry complete-ly so no moisture will remain trapped between the metal and wood parts. Apply shellac of a 2-pound cut, either orange or white. Treatment will protect them from rust and insure their bright ap-pearance when they come from storage in the spring. Sports equipment, sleds and tricycles can be protected in this same manner. Coat your mountain cabin snow wax it, and the snow will come right off it.

4. DATA CARDS. Recipe, workshop data cards, and similar records will withstand a lot of dirty-finger hanshifted a be of carry-inger later shellac. Pour very thin solution in shallow dish and pass a card through, holding by tweezers. Drain and stand on edge until shellac hardens. Alcohol may loosen the pigment on typed cards, but a gentle wiping with cotton or clean cloth will remove excess color that may have smeared.

Amaryllis Has a New Look

in its favor. In the first place, the hybrids are entirely new in comparison with variety belladonna of grandmother's day. The latter type usually is available in pink only; the hybrids contain some of the richest colors in the entire plant kingdom.

From a purely botanical view-point the belladonna amaryllis is supposed to be the only true type. But the average amateur gardener is more interested in clegance of bloom than in the exact structure of a plant. It is interesting to point out that the belladonna amaryllis produces its foliage after the flowers have died down. This type is usually planted in summer for fall bloom while the hybrids should be planted in October, November and December and also during the early spring months.

THE AMARYLLIS hybrids are exceedingly easy to grow. They want a sunny location and shelter from the prevalling winds. Lots of sun is essential for healthy growth, and this holds true whether the plants are grown in the outdoor garden or in pots.

The amaryllis is probably the largest bulb stocked by your garden supply dealer. Chances are he will have several sizes available. The size of the planting stock depends on the manner you reserve a space for two handsome foliage plants - the fancy-leaved caladium and co-

Both, natives of the tropics, thrive in the Long Beach area.

The catadium has large six to seven-inch arrow-shaped leaves, rising on slender three-foot stems. The texture of the leaves is almost like spun glass with a delicate transparency. Color combinations are startling. Among the more unusual variegations are Candidum, an exquisitely beautiful white, veined and feathered with pale green; a crimson, mottled with pink and bronze, also a rich dark green blotched with rose and edged with a lighter green. There are many other vivid variegations.

aladium makes a handsome showing with fine-textured foliage, lavishly tinted and veined in gaudy colors.

er heads that appear in the center of the leaves.

BOTH COLEUS and caladiums can be grown easily, either in pots to add color to a terrace. a patio or an entranceway, or in the shady garden bed. Many people have the notion the caladium is strictly a florist's product. Try growing them, this year, and you'll learn differently.

In the garden, for an effective planting, coleus or caladiums lend charming individuality to the foreground of green hedges. camellias or amid ferns and other shade-loving plants.

Both plants, true children of the tropics, are heat lovers.

Planting soil should be of a porous nature. Use a combined mixture of peat moss, coarse sand, leaf mold and well rotted Coleus can be purchased at nurseries, either as tiny seed-lings in flats or as small potted plants. The potted plants, since they are larger, tend to show up the beautiful markings and rich variegations to better advantage. Set the plants about a foot apart. They will soon fill the intervening space. Keep well watered, especially in hot weather. Guard against aphid attacks.

Caladium can be started from tubers. It is best to start the tubers in flats or pots, the same as tuberous begonias.

THE BRILLIANT-HUED foliage does not appear until four or five leaves have opened. As the plants develop, both colcus and caladiums respond with more vivid colorings when given frequent feedings of liquid manure.

As the summer season gets under way both plants will require more water. Do not water the foliage.

Both plants will continue to produce their beautiful foliage all through summer until frost.

Coleus can be removed to pots before frost and kept as indoor plants for winter.

The caladium dies down in fall, usually early in October. Dig up the bulbs, then, and when all foliage is completely dried, store the bulbs in dry peat moss or vermiculite for replanting next spring, when they can be started all over again for next summer's growing.

Popular with Long Beach garden fans, dahlias do well here. Now is time to get the soil ready.

Get Ready for Dahlias

By A. C. McLeod

TT'S TIME now to make plans for dahlia planting in Long Brach area gardens.

Chosen over and over again for their variety in color and blossom forms, the dahlia is a favorite throughout the state as a cut flower, spectacular garden subject or show specimen. Whatever use you plan to put them to, it is time to begin preparing the dahlia bcd, says the California Association of Nursery-

Advance preparation of the dahlia bed may be done as much as two to three months before planting. The bed should be spaded deeply with manure, compost or peat moss if needed. If dahlia bed preparation is done shortly before planting, use no

Plant dahlias in another month or so. The dahlia needs warm soil to produce rich color and maximum size. If planted early when the weather is still wintery the dahlia may either have rotting tubers from late rains, or, coming into early bloom, suffer from the midsummer sun.

THE DAHLIA grows from two to 15 feet in height and is a bulb flower. Its branched stems are coarse and strong and topped with blooms of white, yellow, red and purple. Foliage is shiny and varying from light yellow-green to bronze-green.

Some of the types of dahlia blossom forms are the ball, pompon, decorative rosette, peony, single and collarette, all of which are usually known as the common garden dahlia.

Other varieties are the tree and cactus. The tree grows from 12 to 16 feet and is semi-woody with pinkish-lavender flowers, single or semi-double, blooming in October and November.

The cactus dahlia is a fourfoot type with double or semidouble flowers of searlet. Within this variety are variations with different petal structures and one of dwarf form.

Tree New Look Amaryllis Tips on

If the bulbs are grown in pots, select the largest sizes. But don't use too large a pot or the soil may sour. For general outdoor culture bulbs that measure from 2½ to 2¾ inches will suffice. There will be no cramping of the root system in the open soil and the roots will thus grow large enough to support heavy top growth.

AMARYLLIS HYBRIDS prefer a sandy loam that has been thoroughly enriched. The plants are heavy feeders. Commercial growers — one of the largest commercial plantings of amaryllis in the world is located in Southern California - apply from 25 to 40 tons of cow manure per acre before planting. When growth starts, a well balanced commercial food is applied at the rate of approximately seven pounds to every 100 feet of row. The final feed-ing starts when the buds first show and is continued once every three weeks until the blooms open. For potted amaryllis you can use either plant food tablets, a commercial dry food or liquid fertilizer. Just make sure the plants get plenty to eat.

Regular watering is important. In the open garden the plants require a thorough irrigation at least once every 10 days. Of course, this figure should be balanced against the local rainfall. But keep in mind that the amaryllis does not enjoy a surface sprinkling; make sure that sufficient water is applied so it will penetrate down to the root zone.

Be careful that you do not overwater specimens that are grown in pots. Before potting up the bulb make certain that there is a sufficient amount of drainage material at the bottom of the container. Broken pieces of erockery should be placed directly over the drainage hole.

ONE SINGLE FLOWER will make a complete indoor decoration all by itself. The stems should be cut at a height of four inches above the surface. This allows the foliage to grow but minimizes any danger of the stem rotting. The pollen should be removed from the flowers before they are arranged in a vase. This treatment will increase the weeks.

During the past few years there has been a new style in amaryllis hybrids. Breeders are trying to get away from the old-fashioned star-shaped florets. The new look in amaryllis consists of a rounded flower with a shorter trumpet. But new models are not produced over night. It takes three years to produce a flower from seed.

Tips on Gardening

GARDENING TIPS for the week... Cut all flowers before they go to seed. This conserves the plant's energy and prolongs the flowering period.

Use snail baits freely to control this pest. A new snail tape is available which acts as a barrier, keeping snails from your garden.

Camellias require shallow planting and lots of moisture. Do not cultivate deeply as the roots, being near the surface, may be injured.

Dwarf Dusty Miller is gaining increasing importance in Long Beach area as a border plant, and to get contrast.

By Walter Finch

O BRING OUT best effects in color combinations, an effective device is to use white or gray, a neutral tone, to emphasize the contrast. In gardening, one singularly successful plant that is useful for providing band of neutral gray is the dwarf Dusty Miller. This hardy and drought-resistant perennial is becoming increasingly popular throughout California as a taller growing border plant and is even occasionally seen as a mass bed planting, interspersed with flowering annuals.

Members of the California Bedding Plant Advisory Board have been lavish in their praise this excellent bedding plant which does so much for so little in the way of work and effort. Like many of the perennial bedding plants, Dusty Miller will give continuing service for many seasons, thus reducing the work load required in the flower beds.

WHEN YOU WANT IT

WHERE YOU WANT IT

Dwarf Dusty Miller or centaurea candidissima, is a compact bushy growing plant of about one in height. It tends to spindle a little during the summer blooming period but otherwise maintains a low compact appearance. While it is too tall to plant in front of pansy or other low growing bedding plants there are many other plants that will show up well behind it, such as calendula, stock, snapdragon, marigold, aster, zinnia, petunia nad dahlia, as well as most of the perennials, such as geum, calladria, coreopsis, delphinium, Shasta daisy, carnation and others.

It should be noted that the appeal of the dwarf Dusty Miller is in the foliage and not in the blossom. Indeed, many professional gardeners snip off the flowers as they appear. While they are a lively yellow, there is a stretching of the plant growth while the blooming cycle is oc-

DWARF DUSTY MILLER is used most frequently as a ribbon border planting. Due to its uniform growth habit, it works ex-cellently for this purpose and will give little cause for concern once it is established. Few border plants will perform as well with as little care, for dwarf Dusty Miller seems to have developed no major pests. Added to this virtue is the fact that dwarf Dusty Miller requires practically no watering or fertilizing which would seem to make it close to an ideal bedding plant for home garden use.

For a bed of ivy geranium, a touch of color will be added during the periods of light bloom or dormancy by interspersing plants of dwarf Dusty Miller in the planting. The same thought can be used in a bulb planting, with the purpose of supplying a little interest both before the bulbs make top growth and after the plants are dying down.

Everything you need for lawn care!

FOR A PICTURE LAWN, Golf Brand Lawn Seed. Grows a lawn of lasting beauty! Contains 11 per-ennial grasses, blended to thrive in sun or shade, on level or grade. With proper care, a Golf Brand lawn will grow ever thicker and more luxuriant... until you have a turf so thick it crowds out weeds.

Because these fine perennial grasses are slower to develop than coarser quick-growing ryegrass, Golf Brand won't reach its peak the year you plant it. But the permanent, beautiful lawn you finally get is well worth waiting for. Plant Golf Brand now for best results.

In 1 lb. and 5 lb. boxes, and 25 lb. bags

FOR A GOOD LAWN, Fore! Lawn Seed.

Grows a lawn definitely above average. A blend of perennial grasses and clover...including quick-germinating varieties for pleasing results...use it in sun or moderate shade.

In 1 lb, and 5 lb, boxes

FOR A PLAY LAWN. Homelawn Grass Seed. Grows a quick and thrifty lawn. Germinates quickly, is excellent for poorer growing conditions and areas under-going heavy wear and traffic.

Fertilizer

Golf Brand Lawnfood feeds your lawn 2 important ways. Contains: (1) fast-acting chemical nitrogen to give grass immediate sparkle and lushness (2) organic nitrogen, plus other needed food elements, for the steady slow feeding that means sound and continuing growth. Goes further! One pound does the work of three pounds of ordinary fertilizers.

Kill most lawn weeds, crabgrass, using your garden hose! No complicated equipment, no measuring or mixing. Besides your garden hose, you'll need:

Golf Brand 2-4D Lawn Weed Killer. delions, plantains, most broad-leaved weeds. Pint covers 2000 sq. ft. Also in quarts.

Golf Brand Crabgrass Killer . . . kills erabgras also controls many common lawn diseases. Pint covers 1200 sq. ft. Also in quarts.

Gourmet's Delight

roasted kid and Sila trout in all Italy. There is cheese with meals, and desserts of figs, prickly pears and oranges. And the wines? The red, medium-sweet Ciro; white, medium-sweet Greco, and the red, dry Altavilla are true delights.

In Campania, you become acquainted with the Italian version of France's "Pain Perdue," or "lost bread." The Italians "lose" their bread in an interesting coating of white Mozzarella cheese, flour and whisked egg. Then the bread is fried.

Rome itself could be the source of a book about food that would be as thick as a man's arm if one could be written. But no matter where you go in historic region of Laszio, you will enjoy eating abbacchio — young lamb, usually three weeks old, roasted in rosemary and herbs. When you see the words "abbachio all cacclatora," you may order it to eat young lamb that has been fried and flavored with anchovy sauce.

And the wines for the most part are the world-famous wines of the Castelli Romani; also, Est Est Est, a white, medium-sweet

Stamp Notes

Libya has issued three new stamps for the Arab Postal Union. All three depict a world globe with Arabic designs. . . To honor the Third Boy Scouts Patrol Camp, Cuba has issued a special 4 centavos green stamp. The design shows a cub scout saluting. The Cuban flag is in the background. . . Syria pays tribute to the University of Syria with two new stamps of identical design showing students on the campus.

wine, and Cesanese, a red wine that can be either dry or sweet.

In northern Italy, while visiting the beautiful old towns of Turin, Asti, Alessandria, Novara and Cuneo, you will find fonduta, a cheese delicacy made by melting cheese from the Val de'Aosta with butter, egg yolks, milk and topping of snow-white truffles.

THE GNOCCHI OF TRENTINO— now there is a food that you will want to write a poem about back in Hometown, U. S. A. Gnocchi is simply dumplings of potatoes and flour, or of semolina cooked in milk or salted water, flavored with ragout or with flour, milk, eggs and Parmesan cheese. But the taste, ah, mesdames et messieurs, it's exceeded only by the bouquet of the wines you'll drink in Trento, Udine, Glorizia and Bolzano.

While viewing the beauties of the Grand Canal, or St. Mark's Square in Venice, pause at one of the quaint restaurants and feel free to order such fascinating foods as Risi e bisi, a thick minestra of rice, peas, onion, bacon and ham.

Perhaps when packing to board your American Export Lines' sunliner back to New York you may find a battered, long ago forgotten diet in the bottom of your suitcase. Ignore it, burn it up, throw it away — you are taking the best part of your Italian adventure back with you in the form (fitting, of course) of happy Italian kitchen hours. For this is the heart and mind of old Italy.

ART MORGAN

The Prime Rib Must Be Perfect

AFTER DINING with her family on prime rib the other evening at Ricarts, 4363 Atlantic Ave., pretty little Janet Sandler, 7, asked waiter Bob Bryan for a paper bag. She explained that she was going to take the bone from her prime rib home to her dog.

Her dog must've been pretty disappointed. Bryan noted that Janet had eaten every sliver of meat off the bone, picking it so clean it gleamed and leaving not even a taste of meat for her pet.

But that's the way it is at Ricarts. The prime rib served there has such a savory aroma and is so tender and mouth-watering that the patrons — men, women, children, grandmothers and grandfathers, aunts and uncles — always gobble up every little last scrap.

ART MORGAN, busy manabout-town who is now the sole owner of Ricarts, is at the restaurant nightly, greeting his friends from throughout the Long Beach area. He personally sees to it that the prime rib—long Ricarts' trademark of fame—is perfectly prepared and served with finesse from the copper cart which is rolled to the patrons' tables.

The prime rib is accompanied by a large, tossed green salad, hot baked potato topped with an appetizing cheese sauce, and fresh rolls with plenty of good creamery butter. Equally delicious are the other items on the restaurant's diversified menu—such as the steaks, chops, sea foods and chicken. The prices are reasonable, too, Sunday specials (such as fine braised sirloin tips) starting at $1.80.

Beginning today, a new Sunday Brunch menu will be featured at Ricarts, including such interesting items as lamb kidneys, Philadelphia scrapple and, of course, wonderful creamy scrambled eggs, pancakes, fried ham and breakfast steaks. If you haven't tried Sunday Brunch at Ricarts — served from 11 a. m. to 2 p. m. — you just haven't lived.
